Better Days Coming
Jay-Walkers Beware

—By Arthur Brisbane—

AN OLD DONKEY that worked in Colorado mines so long that few could remember when he started is dead at last. He was worked until he couldn't work any more, or even eat. Then they shot him.

Now he is to be "honored" with a memorial, built by ore samples from all the mines in which he worked.

A touching picture, it will be appreciated by many old two-legged workers, including white collar men, superannuated bank clerks, and others.

They are less fortunate than the old mine burro. Nobody builds a monument to them, and nobody shoots them when they can no longer earn a living. They are turned adrift.

High finance in Great Britain must be puzzled about its gold reserve. Within two weeks France has drawn $55,000,000 gold from London, using the money to buy its allotment of World Bank shares.

Britain, that supplied billions in cash to France and other allies in the war, now sees France, prosperous, without any unemployment problem, and a billion dollars in gold accumulated in New York.

The French are able and thrifty.

Secretary Lamont predicts "normal business in three months." April contracts for new construction amounted to $483,000,000, biggest month since August, but lower than last April. Many will be glad to hear that, even those that specialize in pessimism.

New York, following other cities, arrests "jay walkers" to reduce automobile fatalities.

Proud citizens are indignant when told they mustn't stroll across the streets, reading a newspaper, or looking in one direction and walking in another.

A public street is more dangerous than a railroad track. A locomotive at least stays on the tracks. An automobile goes anywhere. Pedestrians as well as drivers should obey the law of common sense.

The Seattle Stock Exchange, moving recently into its new building that cost nearly $4,000,000, offers a new idea to big business in other cities.

It includes in one building the stock exchange, curb exchange, grain exchange, marine exchange, and wholesale butter, egg, cheese and poultry exchanges.

The growth of Seattle's stock exchange has been phenomenal. When organized two years ago, combination seats for the stock and curb exchanges sold for $250. They sold recently for $9000.

Nature, encouraged, works wonders.

In 1892 the United States established a herd of 1300 reindeer in Alaska. They have grown to more than 200,000 head.

The Canadians are establishing a herd in their vast northern territory. One patch of 15,000 square miles, east of the MacKenzie river delta, will supply grazing for 250,000 reindeer, and provide food for natives, suffering because of game destruction.

Owen J. Roberts, of Philadelphia, nominated for the Supreme Court, will be approved by the Senate. The fact that he is supposed not to believe in prohibition will not cause him to be barred.

It is a good thing to allow even a Supreme Court judge to do his own thinking.

If you bar a man today for not believing in prohibition, you might bar one tomorrow for not believing in Christian Science or Episcopalianism or Catholicism, or the Monroe Dectrine.

In 17 seconds, 20 men with parachutes jumped from a twin motored Curtiss Condor, a new world record.

The interesting jumper was Armand Lizotte, newsreel photographer. He sat on the wing of an airplane, photographing the jumpers, then he jumped, pulled the string of his parachute, and, sailing comfortably downwards, continued taking pictures of the jumpers.

Henry Bushmeyer, last to jump, passed the others by dropping several thousand feet before pulling the string.

SCHOOL HEAD LEADS BOLT IN CHURCH

Leaders in Waltham Congregation Walk Out in Dispute Over Pastor's Remarriage

The split in the First Congregational Church, Waltham, over its pastor, the Rev. Dr. Walter H. Commons, developed into an open break when announcement was made he would retain the pastorate.

Headed by Supt. of Public Schools William H. Slayton, a number of prominent members of the church last night tendered their resignations when the announcement was made at a special meeting.

With the added statement that Dr. Commons would make a brief statement of explanation, half a dozen members, including Supt. Slayton, left the meeting.

Among those whose resignations were tendered were Deacon and Mrs. E. J. Mosman and Deacon Albert Rankin.

Dr. Commons originally tendered his resignation on April 27, on demand from some of his parishioners following his divorce and subsequent remarriage.

He had divorced his wife on the grounds of religious difference which he charged constituted cruel and abusive treatment, and in April married Miss Bertha S. Temple of Rich st., Waltham.

On May 12 the matter of accepting the pastor's resignation went before the church body, and by a vote of 136 to 99 it was rejected.

At that meeting an alleged "love letter," received by Dr. Commons while married to his first wife, was the subject of considerable discussion.

The clergyman's friends explained it as having been written by "a silly schoolgirl," who had

ADMIRALS FLAY UNFAIR PACT

Washington, May 20—Two more admirals told Senate committee today that the London naval treaty would leave the United States in a position of inferiority.

One, Rear-Admiral H. E. Barnell, chief of the Navy's Engineers' Bureau, an adviser to the American delegates, warned that Japan is aiming at parity with the United States.

Rear Admiral J. V. Chase of the general board said the pact did not represent parity with Great Britain, and had many other flaws from the viewpoint of a navy man.

Although he was an adviser at the London conference, Rear Admiral J. R. P. Pringle said he was consulted but once by the American delegation.

He advised the delegates against

GOVERNOR SQ. 'L' FIGHT ON

The subway extension bill, designed to relieve Governor sq. traffic congestion, received a world of support and some little opposition in hearing today before the House ways and means committee.

Already passed by the Senate, the bill would authorize a city bond issue for $3,100,000 to extend the subway beneath Governor sq. to points beyond on Beacon st. and Commonwealth ave.

Support was given by representatives of Mayor Curley, the Boston Chamber of Commerce and the Elevated trustees. The legislators themselves provided the opposition, some believing nothing should be done until after the referendum on "L" ownership at the autumn election. Others objected to the day labor provision of the measure and others to the possible inconvenience that would be caused American Legion convention delegates and tercentenary celebration visitors by the start of work this year.

MEANS WORK FOR 500

Thomas H. Bilodeau, legislative counsel for Boston, said the day labor provision would provide some relief for the city's unemployed and Ernest R. Springer, chief engineer of the Boston Transit Department, assured the committee if work were started this summer it would be bridged over daily in order that traffic through the square would not be greatly affected.

He thought between 500 and 600 workers would be employed in three shifts on the job.

Dirigible Rolling Along at 50 Miles Per Hour Since Leaving Spain This Morning

London, May 20 (AP)—The Associated Press received a message from the Pacific Steam Navigation Co. steamship Orita stating that it had sighted the Graf Zeppelin at 12:24 p. m. E. S. T. about 400 miles southwest of Cadiz, which the Graf Zeppelin passed over at 4:45 a. m. E. S. T., indicating that the dirigible was averaging about 50 miles an hour.

She was then about 350 miles northeast of the Canary Islands.

Seville, Spain, May 20 (AP)—Spain's traditional farewell, "Vivan Ustedes Con Dios"—"May You Go With God"—was said to the Graf Zeppelin this morning as the giant dirigible pulled loose from its mooring mast and started its first trans-equatorial crossing, a trip across the Atlantic to Pernambuco and Rio Janeiro, Brazil.

Delayed more than an hour in loading mail and replenishing its hydrogen supply, the big craft, which arrived here yesterday from Friedrichshafen, did not get away until 8:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m. E. S. T.). It circled the field twice and then headed westward toward the Atlantic, 3750 miles of which it must cross before reaching the Brazilian coast.

Weather conditions were ideal.

"I expect to make Pernambuco in 48 or 50 hours," Dr. Eckener said just before entering the gondola of his ship. "I shall take a direct line to the city, passing over Teneriffe, Canary Islands, and the Cape Verde Islands."

GRAF'S FLIGHT FROM SEVILLE LIKE DEPARTURE OF COLUMBUS

FETE DAY IN CITY AS SHIP TAKES OFF

Passengers Pleased With the Comforts of First Leg of Trip From Germany

EXCLUSIVE

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Special Correspondent Aboard the Graf Zeppelin

(Copyright, 1930, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., in United States, Canada, Mexico, Japan, South America, England, Ireland, and Continental Europe. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

Special Cable Dispatch

Seville, May 20—The Graf Zeppelin took off from La Tablada airport here at 8:32 a. m. (4:32 eastern daylight saving time), bound for Pernambuco, Brazil.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, master of the round-the-world dirigible, said that he expected to reach South America in 60 hours.

Seville yesterday was host to an international caravan of the air. The arrival of the Graf Zeppelin meant "holiday."

Dr. Eckener last night was the guest of honor at a dinner tendered by Prince Alfonso de Bourbon, together with the civil governor of Seville and his staff and local air officers.

The city is a riot of color, and the Hotel Alfonso, where the passengers of the Zeppelin stayed overnight, is crowded with guests, autograph seekers and amateur photographers. "Holiday" is the password in Seville and all Sevillanos took advantage of the occasion to don their party garb and visit the landing field.

In the sharp fingers of the searchlights on the airfield, the Graf wriggles lazily at the mooring mast. The refueling went on through the night in preparation for today's takeoff. Thousands crowded to the guard line, where double ranks of policemen and soldiers kept the crowds away from the craft.

VICTORY AGAIN
Elements Conquered by Eckener's Skill

The Zeppelin's was not the only remarkable flight that ended here. At 5:40 p. m., just eight minutes before we arrived over Seville, a special German Lufthansa mail plane, flown by Capt. Wiskant, arrived from Berlin with 3000 letters and postcards for the Graf to take across the Atlantic.

The special mail plane had been in the air since 3 a. m., and was followed into Seville by a tri-motored Junkers plane bearing numerous German newspaper correspondents. They, in their plane, will accompany us as far as Cadiz today.

When Dr. Eckener brought the Graf down here at twilight it was another conquest over the elements added to his already long list of victories over wind and storm.

Of the thousands whose cheers welcomed us as we settled down over the landing field few could realize the strain that the Zeppelin's commander had been under.

Nor did many of the 22 argonauts aboard for that matter. Most of them had slept peacefully through the night's battle against buffeting head winds and drenching rain down the Rhone valley. The thunder squalls encountered over Constance, Lake Constance, scarcely an hour out of Friedrichshafen, had not dismayed them, so great was their confidence in Dr. Eckener's ability.

By 9:30 a. m. we had passed over Malaga, Spain, the point at which Dr. Eckener had previously planned to cut across, northward of Gibraltar, directly for Seville.

Since he was two hours ahead of schedule the commander determined to strike for Seville by a round about course, giving his passengers a view of the African coast.

At 11:25 a. m. (7:25 a. m. Eastern daylight time) we were over Ceuta, Morocco. From there through the Straits of Gibraltar was easy flying. At 1:15 p. m. (9:15 a. m. E. D. T.) we sighted Cadiz.

COMFORT IN AIR
Different Than Plane and Best For Travel

"This is indeed air travel! In airplanes it is flying!"

No greater recommendation could be given the Graf Zeppelin than this spontaneous exclamation of Herr Wronsky, director of the German Lufthansa, Germany's heavier-than-air traffic operating company, with more than 250 planes in operation, as the Graf sped toward Seville.

Herr Wronsky is making his first trip in a Zeppelin to study how dirigibles and airplanes can best operate in transocean passenger and mail traffic.

Co-operation between lighter-than-air and heavier-than-air aircraft has already been agreed upon between Dr. Eckener and the Lufthansa, with a third important co-operative factor—the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, which apparently has vision.

"Airplanes have speed which airships can never rival," Herr Wronsky continued, "and are of an importance that must not be underestimated.

"The Graf, on the other hand, offers comfort and quiet in air travel with the opportunity to move about, which, at their best, the largest planes will not approach for some years, if ever. I am happy to have had this experience."

Since our start from Friedrichshafen we have traveled approximately 1440 miles.

We traveled one time at as low a speed as 28 miles an hour and at another time established a new airship speed record of 208 kilometers, or 129 miles an hour. That on but four motors with a mistral wind pushing us all the way from Point de Beaudoc, France, to Mamon, on the Balearic Islands.

FLYING LOW
Dodge Storms 500 Feet from Ground

We were at times as high as 2400 feet, and at others we swooped down to within 500 feet of the land or sea.

We battled through a spectacular series of thunder squalls in the foothills of Switzerland and dashed through a torrential downpour of rain in the Rhone valley, again bringing to full play the superb navigating ability of Dr. Eckener and his officer, justifying once more the commander's title of "Storm King."

All day we loafed along slowly in the glorious sunshine, because Dr. Eckener had announced that he wanted to land at Seville around 8 o'clock in the evening. He wanted to keep his word and not disappoint scores of people by arriving at 3 p. m., which he could have done.

So we loafed along on four motors, and those well throttled, from dawn on. Just as day broke we saw the sunny coast of Spain glide by. Then we circled Gibraltar, crossing over to the African coast, visiting Ceuta and Tetuan, and Tangiers, the uniquely internationally governed coastal town.

From Tangiers we headed toward Cadiz.

"It has been a wonderful flight so far," declared Commander Shoemaker, of the U. S. Navy. "We have had all varieties of weather to test the Graf."

Dr. Eckener had called Commander Shoemaker to the bridge during the thunderstorms last night in the Rhine valley.

Referring to the time that he had stood beside the grizzled commander while Dr. Eckener dodged his ship in and out of the squalls, the American naval officer said:

"Germans plan things thoroughly and execute them carefully. There was splendid teamwork on the bridge. Dr. Eckener stood on one side and Capt. Lehmann on the other. Capt. Fleming was there, too. Every man was on his toes. There was never a moment of doubt, however, as to who commanded. The teamwork was almost silent. It was very interesting to me."

TODAY'S BATTLE TO SETTLE FATE OF GRUNDY

Republicans Are Badly Split in Pennsylvania as the Polls Open for Primaries

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

Philadelphia, May 20 (INS)—In a fog of uncertainty, suspicion and Republican factional bitterness, Pennsylvania marched to the polls today to settle by ballots the most chaotic primary in the state's history.

More than 3,500,000 Pennsylvanians are entitled to vote. Probably 2,500,000 of them will exercise the privilege. They will decide whether "Uncle Joe" Grundy or James J. Davis or Francis H. Bohlen gets the Republican senatorial nomination, and whether Gifford Pinchot or Francis Shunk Brown or Thomas W. Phillips wins the gubernatorial nomination.

The Democrats have an unopposed slate headed by Sedgwick Kistler, wealthy manufacturer, for senator, and James M. Hemphill for governor, so the fighting and the bitterness is all on the Republican side.

WATCHERS AT POLLS

The actual balloting began under the watchful eyes of a small army of poll watchers, under-cover agents, and hired gumshoe men representing all the Republican candidates and the United States Senate as well.

Wide open charges have been made of fraudulent plots, trading, dealing, intimidation, coercion and general political skullduggery, mud has been indiscriminately thrown by all concerned, and it is considered likely that whoever wins will have to convince a Senate committee that everything was aboveboard.

DRY ISSUE CONFUSED

The injection of the wet-and-dry issue, in the most virulent form imaginable, has knocked all the predictions and forecasts galley west. The most seasoned of Keystone political prophets privately confess themselves stumped as to the outcome.

The wets are represented by the Phillips-Bohlen ticket. This ticket was entered only after Pinchot and Grundy had declared themselves dry, and after the Davis-Brown ticket had declined to take a positive stand one way or another on the issue.

PURITANS WERE LIBERAL, SAYS SAUNDERSON

Unitarian Delegates Told They Were Not Rigid in Their Creed

Instead of being rigid in their creeds, the Puritans were liberal, according to Dr. Henry Hallan Saunderson of Brighton, speaking today in Tremont Temple to 1500 delegates to the 105th annual meeting of the American Unitarian Association.

Today the delegates took opportunity to celebrate the Massachusetts tercentenary with a song service conducted by Dr. Saunderson.

The Rev. Louis C. Cornish, D.D., president, delivered the annual address. He described achievements of the organization and its alliances in raising nearly $500,000 for Unitarian work, and pleaded for establishment of new churches.

He announced also that he and Prof. F. Stanton Cawley have been commissioned by Gov. Allen to represent the Commonwealth of Massachusetts this summer at the 1000th anniversary of the Icelandic Parliament, the oldest free Parliament in the world.

The principal officers were elected last May. Other officers were:

Dr. Walter Reid Hunt, secretary; Parker E. Marean, administrative vice-president. Regional vice-presidents elected were: Prof. James A. Tufts, Exeter, N. H.; William B. Gardner, Fairhaven; Thomas Webster, Baltimore; Gustave Breaux, Louisville; Morton D. Hull, Chicago; James H. Wolfe, Salt Lake City; A. V. Andrews, Los Angeles, and George Falconer, Montreal.

Directors elected for three years were: Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, Washington, D. C.; Philip P. Sharples, Cambridge; Frank E. Gannett, Rochester; Rev. Raymond B. Bragg, Chicago; Arthur B. Smith, Milton, and Miss Edith Weld Peck, Cincinnati.

Mrs. Hahn Drops $500,000 Art Suit

New York, May 20—Mrs. Andree Hahn's $500,000 suit against Sir Joseph Duveen—a sensation in the art world a year ago—has been settled out of court. Attorneys for the litigants issued a formal statement yesterday.

Mrs. Andree Hahn

Sir Joseph reserves the right of expression of his original opinion that Mrs. Hahn's copy of "La Belle Ferronière" is not the original by Leonardo da Vinci. He admits that "it is of great antiquity."

Information as to what had induced Mrs. Hahn to abandon a second trial of her suit for damages was refused. The formal statement said the settlement was arrived at "without impugning the motives or good faith of the plaintiff."

A jury which heard expert evidence as to the authenticity of the painting disagreed at the trial in March, 1929. A second trial was scheduled for this summer, Justice Black having refused a motion to dismiss the complaint.

Dr. Morgan Accepts New Post in Boston

Philadelphia, May 20—Rev. Dr. Campbell Morgan, nationally known lecturer on religious subjects and pastor of the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church here, will accept the invitation of the Gordon College of Theology and Missions in B[illegible]ton to take [illegible] chair of Biblical invitat[illegible].

Dr. Campbell Morgan

The bid for his services was made some time ago, but Dr. Morgan reserved his decision, since it was problematical whether or not he would be able to arrange affairs here to allow himself time to take the teaching post.

Under the present arrangement, Dr. Morgan plans to lecture in New York on Mondays, in Boston on Tuesdays and Wednesdays and return to his work as minister of the church here on Wednesday evenings.

HUB JEWS SCORE PALESTINE BAN ON IMMIGRANTS

Leaders Declare Stoppage by Britain Is a Blow to Rehabilitation

Action of the British government in banning immigration into Palestine was condemned today by prominent Jews of Greater Boston.

The stoppage of immigration, they agreed, will prove a serious blow to rehabilitation in that country which the Jews had hoped to reclaim as their homeland.

Some of their comments follow:

REP. BERNARD GINSBERG of Dorchester — Palestine traditionally and rightfully belongs to the Jews as our national homeland. The Jews throughout the world, relying on the Balfour declaration and the British mandate calling for the rehabilitation of the homeland in Palestine have made sacrifices of pioneer who have gone abroad, and of wealth to reclaim land in a country that has become barren and filthy.

The edict or declaration stopping Jewish immigration to Palestine can be interpreted in no other way than a policy to prevent the Jews from rehabilitating Palestine—an act contrary to the principles of the Balfour declaration and the Mandate of the League of Nations.

The Jewish people appeal to the moral conscience of the world and the opinion of fair-minded people of all nations to protest against the unfair and unjust order denying them the right to enter their homeland.

MORRIS TAYLOR, director of the Federated Jewish Charities—The closing of the Holy Land is a serious thing, especially now when so much thought is being given to the possibilities of its development and rehabilitation. The stoppage of immigration practically without notice makes the international Jewish world problem much more serious. Such reasons as are given by the British government seem but trivial excuses. With no intimation of how long the ban will last, it is to us an alarming state of affairs.

General Strike in Palestine Ordered

Jerusalem, May 20 (AP)—The Jewish National Council today proclaimed a general strike throughout Palestine, effective from Thursday noon to Thursday evening, in protest against stoppage of immigration into the country by the British government.

Jews, and particularly Zionist Jews, are raising a storm of protest over the suspension of immigration.

Protest movements have sprung up at Tel Aviv, Haifa, Jerusalem and in the Emek Valley, with the General Federation of Jewish Labor organizing meetings at other places.

ZEPPELIN AWAY OUT TO SEA

not be until it has visited Rio Janeiro, Pernambuco, Havana and Lakehurst, N. J., and covered some 17,000 miles.

If the Graf had had eyes to see it would have marvelled at the crowd which came with the early daybreak to see the start of the trip. All the color of Seville and Andalusia was there.

Gypsy horsemen in their native costumes came in from the hills and priests from La Rabida, where Columbus in the days of his persecution was sheltered, came with facsimiles of Columbus documents. The crew of the Zeppelin took some of them and later released them from the air to the delight of the scampering crowd below.

The Zeppelin soared away from her ground position and presently dumped her water ballast in a great shower. This gave impetus to her rise, but drenched the crowd below. The people laughed it off as the price of seeing the historic event.

Three Years Ago Lindy Soared Into Arms of Fame

Lindy, 3 Years Ago, Made His Epoch Hop

New York, May 20 (INS)—Three years ago today Charlie Lindbergh went and done it.

Since the time the obscure air mail flyer streaked his name across the sky from New York to Paris, he has become as well known as the White House. The decorations he may hand down to his grandchildren would fill a tri-motored plane.

Today, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is the first American aviation ace, holds the record for international air mileage, and sits and flies with the great of the world.

But in the early dawn of May 20, 1927, he was just a young, blonde mail pilot tinkering over his plane, "The Spirit of St. Louis," at Curtiss field.

Those careful preparations were noted but not stressed by observers. For there were famous pilots at the field waiting for the grand adventure when the bad weather should slacken.

Lindbergh did not wait. He hopped for Paris with no more noise than the hum of his motor.

No individual performance, not even the swimming of the Hellespont, attracted so much international attention. The eyes of all nations followed the air trail blazed by the lone American from hour to hour.

And when Lindbergh arrived at Le Bourget Field in the shadow of the lights of Paris, the world shouted its acclaim.

Here was youth strutting its wings.

Returning to his native land, the country went Lindbergh. The flying of the Atlantic by this slim western youth made America air-conscious. American aviation leaped forward.

Lady Drummond Hay Tells of Real Holiday Spirit on Flight to Seville

Special Cable Dispatch

Seville, May 20—With a thrilling battle through thunder squalls, and setting a spectacular speed record over a beautiful panorama, spread under a starry sky and gilded by dawn, the Graf Zeppelin gloriously fulfilled the most extravagant expectations of its passengers on the first lap, from Friedrichshafen to Seville, of its South American flight.

The passengers had an opportunity to savor almost every airship travel sensation. The Zeppelin plunged into a tempestuous maelstrom of half a dozen successive thunder and lightning squalls between Constance and Basle, Switzerland, but all the inevitable rocking and rolling did not spoil the appetites of even the greenest of the passengers. Dinner was served in two series as the Graf was over full.

Many of the passengers were reluctant to retire from the fascination of watching the brilliant night picture over France and then the Mediterranean.

RECORD SPEED
Air Official Lauds Zeppelin's Triumph

Some who rose before dawn were rewarded by glimpses of incomparable scenic gems off the Balearic islands and later, from Cartegena southwards, past white Almeria, down the Spanish coast, arid and brown against the background of the Sierra Nevadas.

Those who kept the vigil, the whole or part of the night, shared the thrill of the sensational speed record of some 129 statute miles an hour with the triumphant and excited watch on the bridge.

Never before has an airship streaked through space at such a tremendous rate.

The Spanish passengers were voluble in their delight. No greater compliment could be paid to Zeppelin travel than the unstinted praise of Herr Wronsky, director of Lufthansa, great German heavier-than-air commercial transport company. He said:

"It is the ideal way for pleasure travel to see the world."

Frau Hammer, traveling to join her husband, the famous pilot, in Rio de Janeiro, is brimming over with active technical interest. She takes the prize for traveling with the smallest quantity of baggage ever carried by a man or woman passenger on the Zeppelin. Eleven pounds is her self-ordained quota.

It always amuses me to watch the transformation of a scrupulously tidy Zeppelin within a few minutes from the embarkation of the passengers to a pell-mell confusion of maps, notebooks, cameras, binoculars, pencils, guide books, etc.

HOLIDAY SPIRIT
Dr. Eckener Jolly After Storms Vanish

The suggestion for the organization of a game of table tennis was without success. Dr. Badt, of the German finance ministry, walked around with a checker board and pieces, seeking recruits.

But nothing could lure anyone from the fascination of the windows.

I never remember Dr. Eckener so jolly as he was last night, after the struggle with the weather gods, or the three captains so radiant.

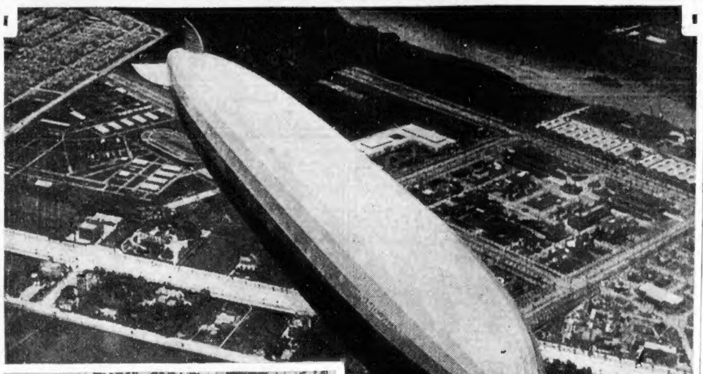
There was a real holiday spirit right through the ship's passengers and crew. There were two sittings for luncheon, with Dr. Eckener presiding at the first service. The menu was made up of fresh salmon, chicken, peas, asparagus salad, and apple pie.

The last vestige of formality always vanishes when there is something to see. This time it was the great rock of Gibraltary, sheltered from the Mediterranean sun by a heavy white umbrella of dense clouds, that cleared Dr. Eckener's table in a jiffy as everyone frantically crowded at the windows to watch.

A little later Ceuta on the African side of the Straits of Gibraltar rose in relief from a turquoise sea; then picturesque Tetuan, sentinelled by the grim Riff Mountains. Thence to Tangiers, where we circled low.

That was to please me. My husband was born in Tangiers during my father's term as British minister there. I also know Tangiers well, and have relatives there.

How Zepp Looked to Seville Before Hop to Brazil



This interesting photograph of the Graf Zeppelin, as it loafed over the city of Seville, Spain, during a recent festival, could easily have been made yesterday as Comdr. Hugo Eckener brought his great silver ship over the Spanish city. Early today the Zeppelin started its long ocean hop to Brazil. (International Newsreel photo.)

Back at the same eating emporium aboard the greatest of all airships are Dr. Hugo Eckener and Lady Drummond Hay, the first woman transatlantic "Zepp" passenger. She is covering the present trip for you. Read her descriptive stories in the Boston Evening American.

'L' BILL MEETS FRIEND AND FOE

tic that the road would operate without a deficit in view of last year's surplus of $90,000 and the estimated rental of $135,000 on a percentage of cost basis.

Bilodeau pointed out that a speeding up of transit, a sure result of the subway extension, would undoubtedly increase revenue of the road.

"L" BOARD FAVORS

Under the provisions of the bill an Elevated operation deficit resulting from the increase in rent would be met on a percentage basis by Boston and other cities and towns.

Henry I. Harriman, chairman of the Elevated trustees, said the board unanimously favored the bill and stressed the fact that the 10-cent fare would not be jeopardized in any way.

Atty. Barnum characterized Mayor Curley's insistence on the day labor provision as a sound civic management argument.

Claude L. Allen, counsel for the Chamber of Commerce, said this was the psychological time to pass the bill.

Rep. Eliot Wadsworth introduced the possibility of inconveniencing visitors during convention and tercentenary year.

WARREN OPPOSES PLAN.

He also opposed the day labor feature, being under the impression that about 450 men might be employed and that the total cost would be greater.

"I agree that something should be done. Were I a member of the Metropolitan commission, I would not favor the bill."

Senator Charles C. Warren, of Arlington, said he could see no benefits accruing to his district from a bill which might result in his district being taxed in case of an operating deficit. He thought the bill should await the result of the referendum on "L" ownership. He advised a "next-annual-session."

Engineer Springer said that the work would start earlier if done by day labor. He estimated the cost of extending the subway to St. Mary st. would be $1,500,000 additional.

POPULATION OF R. I. 685,000

Providence, May 20 (AP)—Rhode Island, believed here to be the first state to complete its census, has a population of 685,017, an increase of 80,620 or 13.3 per cent over the 1920 federal census figures, unofficial computation showed early today.

Newport lost 2825 in the last ten years. The present population is 27,430.

The decrease is due in part to the personnel at the naval training station. There were 2861 at the station in 1920 now there are 1193. The naval torpedo station has fewer civilian employes than ten years ago.

Fitchburg, May 20 (AP)—The population of Winchendon is 6193, a gain of 295 since 1920, census officials said today. The population of Warren is 3761, a gain of 294.

ADMIRAL CHASE SCORES PACT

the cruiser arrangement they finally accepted.

U. S. FLEET INFERIOR.

Admiral Chase said he was in "entire accord" with the board's recommendations for eight-inch gun cruisers.

The American fleet, he said, "occupies an inferior position both as to ships and to tonnage" and the capital ship holiday under the treaty "merely continues" the present unsatisfactory battleship situation.

Comparing the total fleets of America, Great Britain and Japan, Chase said the ratio under the London treaty was 5—5, 2—3, 2—6. He added that the clause allowing certain flexibility in naval strength "must inevitably work against the best interests of the United States."

WARNS OF JAP PERIL.

Admiral Barnell predicted that at the next conference Japan would "ask for actual parity with America and get it."

"If we had to send our fleet to the Philippines now, it would be just a separate gamble. We have no dry dock there and are 7000 miles from home."

"America should lay down two ships to Japan's every one," he warned, "or otherwise the Japanese will claim parity with us and get it."

Pringle told the naval committee he had advised the delegation to "place every available ton in eight-inch gun cruisers."

"As far as fighting goes, the six-inch gun cruiser has no chance against the eight-inch cruiser," he said.

Pringle answered "no" when asked successively if he subscribed to the cruiser provisions of the treaty, if he was shown these provisions in advance, and if he had any opportunity at London to express his opinion on Japan's ratio.

"I do not feel that we have preserved for ourselves the right to construct ships to the proper proportion of what our needs are," said Pringle.

Chase told the foreign relations committee that "certain privileges" were given Japan under the treaty and that the 5-5-3 ratio was not preserved.

Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, a delegate to London, replied that without the treaty Japan was away over the 5—3 radio in cruisers.

"Don't you think it is to the advantage of the United States to have Japan stop building cruisers while we built past her?" asked Reed.

"Yes," said Chase, but he contended that the United States should build the sort of cruisers she needs regardless of Japan.

Reed asked Chase if he was graduated from the war college, or had ever commanded the fleet. The witness said he had not done either.

ASK HULTMAN PROVE CHARGE OR DENY IT

Rooming House Officials Tell of Efforts to Keep South End Morally Clean

Officials of the Boston Rooming House Association today demanded that Police Commissioner Hultman either prove his quoted charge that a vice district exists in the South End or deny that he made it.

Drawing attention to expenditures made by the association to keep the South End a clean, moral district for thousands of students, Mary A. Snyder, president, and Isabel M. Graham, secretary, in a letter to the commissioner, state:

"We do not know a city in the country whose officials would broadcast such undesirable, such detrimental publicity. Cities spend thousands, some millions, telling the world they are desirable places in which to locate."

The letter was accompanied by clippings from two Boston papers, not the American.

"May we ask your favor in either proving that you have a vice district in the South End and wish to warn the world of the fact, or that you have been grossly misquoted."

The association pledged its cooperation with officials if charges were true and asked a correction if they were untrue. The letter also said:

"May we also call your attention to the opposition which has met us on all sides from officials in our efforts to secure legislation to have the one-room flats registered and houses containing a number of one-room flats, licensed and inspected, as are our rooming houses.

HUB PRIEST IN PERIL IN CHINA

Washington, May 20—Believing them to be in peril, American Consul David C. Berger has instructed all American women missionaries at Chiaying to proceed to Swatow at once, the State Department was advised today.

Berger, who is consul at Swatow, described conditions in the interior of China as "exceedingly chaotic." Of the 23 magisterial districts five are reported to be in the hands of the "Reds," according to Berger.

Among American residents at Chiaying, according to State Department records, are Maurice F. Ahern, Hartford, and the Rev. John D. Gallagher, Boston.

The Rev. John D. Gallagher, A. F. M., is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Gallagher of 48 Pierce ave., Dorchester and was ordained to the priesthood in June, 1927.

ANDERSON DIES ON GALLOWS

Sydney, N. S., May 20—In the ghastly glow of a dozen lights a few hours before dawn today, Ingvald "Bing" Anderson, former champion ski jumper of New England, was hanged for the murder of DeBlois Rehberg, hotel clerk, on the night of February 10.

When the moment came to walk the six paces from his cell, through a window onto the gallows, Anderson retained the studied indifference which marked his demeanor since he learned that he was irrevocably doomed.

The last vestige of hope vanished late yesterday when, at Ottawa, Canadian Minister of Justice Ernest Lapointe denied final appeal for a reprieve on behalf of the condemned man, to permit presentation of evidence concerning his mental condition.

At 1:10 today the guards appeared at Anderson's cell and he began the walk to his death. Two minutes later he paid for his crime.

CHURCH SPLITS OVER PASTOR

sent a similar epistle to another minister. Supt. of Schools Slayton was one of the church members who made vigorous demands that Dr. Commons' resignation be accepted.

The pastor, when informed of the action of the church, said he would render a decision later on the question of withdrawing his resignation. This decision was contained in the report of the standing committee presented last night.

After it was announced the question was then on accepting the standing committee's report, and another controversy arose, the report eventually being accepted by a vote of 68 to 62.

THEY WALK OUT.

Supt. Slayton thereupon arose and announced it was the last time he would be seen in the church, his action being followed by a number of others.

Dr. Commons, when he appeared, said he had decided to abide by the wishes of the majority of the parishioners, and withdraw his resignation.

Referring to those who had left, he said it did no good to run away from a problem, which should be faced.

HOOVER OFF FOR NAVAL REVIEW

Aboard the U. S. S Salt Lake City, off the Virginia Capes, May 20 (INS)—President Hoover took the bridge of the Salt Lake City—first of the 10,000-ton eight-inch-gun cruisers this nation has laid down—and cruised out of Hampton Roads today to witness his first review of the United States fleet as commander-in-chief of the navy.

Ahead of him, out on the broad Atlantic, the bulk of America's fighting ships lay waiting, ready to do him honor and demonstrate their effectiveness should ever they be called into battle.

Mr. Hoover and the other official observers arrived at Old Point Comfort, Va., by special train from Washington at 7:30 a. m., and immediately took off for the Salt Lake City in a number of barges.

One of the features of the day is the initial attempt, above the high seas, to dispatch an airplane from one of the aircraft carriers and hook it on the dirigible Los Angeles, the same plane later detaching itself and returning to its floating base.

Coolidge and Critic Differ on 500-Word History

New York, May 20 (US)—Putting it briefly, this is a couple of hundred words about that stirring drama, "Five Hundred Words," which has this cast:

A Reporter......Calvin Coolidge
A Rewrite Man...Gutzon Borglum
A Critic..............John Corbin

Borglum, you remember, was engaged to carve the history of the United States in 500 words on Mount Rushmore, S. D.

Borglum invited Coolidge to write the history. Then Borglum made public what was believed to be the history as written by Coolidge.

Enter Corbin, who today challenged the accuracy of the text. Coolidge wrote Corbin his text had been altered without his consent.

With the unveiling of the inscription set for July 4, no decision has yet been made as to which text will be used.

The argument centers over these paragraphs:

BORGLUM REVISION — "In the Year of Our Lord 1776 the people declared the eternal right to seek happiness — self-government—and the divine duty to defend that right at any sacrifice."

COOLIDGE TEXT—"The Constitution—charter of perpetual union of free people of sovereign states establishing a government of limited powers under an independent President, Congress and court. Charged to provide security for all citizens in their enjoyment of liberty, equality and justice under the law."

BORGLUM'S REVISION—"In 1787 assembled in convention they made a charter of perpetual union of free people of sovereign states establishing a government of limited powers—under an independent President, Congress and court charged to provide security for all citizens in their enjoyment of liberty, equality and justice."

MAN, GIRL LOSE AUTO RIGHTS

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Parker today suspended the license of Joseph Masciarelli of Revere rd., Quincy, and also suspended the right to operate of Miss Clara Tarmey of Jackson st., Quincy, in pursuance of his determination to make the roads safe.

Parker said Masciarelli permitted Miss Tarmey to drive at such speed as to lose control of the machine while turning a corner so that it crashed through a fence and overturned down a 20-foot embankment to the New Haven tracks at Capen's bridge, Braintree.

Both occupants escaped with slight injuries.

Today's action came in the wake of a warning which he sent out a few days ago to drivers who permit inexperienced companions to operate cars.

Francis J. Fitzpatrick of 161 Salem st., Medford, and his brother, Edward D. Fitzpatrick, narrowly escaped drowning today when their automobile crashed through the fence on Mystic ave., Somerville, dropped over a bank and halted two feet from the edge of Mystic river.

The district attorney said he has not decided when he will visit John F. Sullivan, former proprietor of the Ritz.

FORD TO VISIT FIRE MUSEUM

Henry Ford has accepted an invitation to visit the private fire department museum of George Y. Berry, an unpaid substitute member of the Boston department. No date has yet been set for his coming.

Ford has been eager to secure some of the Berry pieces for his Wayside Inn at Sudbury, principally of Box 52, which was sounded for the general alarm fire in Boston in 1872.

PACT FAILS TO FIX FREEDOM OF SEAS

By CAPT. NELSON H. GOSS
United States Navy

(U. S. Naval Academy, 1905; commanded destroyers and convoy escorts in European war zone during World War; graduate Naval War College; recently commanding the U. S. ship Sirius; Captain Goss is a practical sea-going officer who has devoted much study to the subject of sea power and is a well-known writer on naval subjects.)

The London conference did not consider or settle in any way the question of freedom of the seas which concerns the relation between belligerents and neutrals in war. Upon questions connected with this subject depends the size of a navy we need because they determine what is will have to do.

The conference did, however, definitely limit our strength. This has the effect of tying our hands in advance before we know what we may need to do.

The rights of neutrals at sea have always been a debated question. The stronger sea powers have generally disregarded the rights of neutrals unless the neutrals were able to enforce such rights.

CAUSE OF WARS

Beginning with our unofficial war with France back in 1799, all of our foreign wars, except the Mexican War, and including the World Wat. have been due to this question, which in our case has meant interference with our shipping and seaborne trade.

Great Britain, with the aid of her powerful navy, has been a constant aggressor in this direction in the past.

LIMITS ARE DANGEROUS

Various attempts have been made to define and settle the rights of neutrals and belligerents in war concerning blockades; the status of cargoes in transit at sea, of neutral goods in enemy ships; the convoy of merchant vessels by men of war and the status of merchant vessels when manned or directed by naval personnel.

To definitely limit the strength of the navy in advance, before these questions are settled, would seem to be inadvisable and might be a very dangerous thing to do.

(This is the tenth of a series of articles by Captain Goss, analyzing the naval pact recently signed in London. The eleventh article will appear in an early issue of this newspaper, probably tomorrow.)

British Dirigible Preparing for Hop

Cardington, Eng., May 20—The British dirigible R-100 was reported ready for a possible start next week on her transatlantic flight to Canada.

Plans for the flight are still indefinite among Air Ministry authorities.

What American Readers Are Thinking

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor Boston American:

We are constantly being served in the newspapers with the news about missing girls. Then some magazine writer flares up with an article; "Why Girls Leave Home?"

I would not reopen this subject again, but for an item that appeared in your paper, Saturday, May 17. This leaving home on the part of young people and putting their parents to much anxiety and expense, is nothing short of a brain storm,

Young women of today are exacting too much of their parents. They want this dress and that privilege, which involves extra expense, they don't see why they cannot have what other girls have, whose parents are better situated than her own parents. When these are denied, then begins that period of defying parents and conjuring all sorts of plans to humiliate them. They are missing finally from home. These girls want to be missed. They desire to puncture their parents with thoughts that may finally make them come to their demands. I cannot go into other cases, which have different motives back of them, but it is true today that youth in many instances, like to frighten parents.

Says Puritans Thought They Landed In Virginia

Editor Boston American:

Maj. J. W. Hyatt of the Mass. National Guard, 26th Division, and during the World War justly famous in the Yankee Division, now at the State House, is out with an historical statement about the Puritans that will cause wars among historians,

He asserts upon excellent authority that the Puritans when they landed in New England thought they had landed in Virginia. This is what induced them to settle here. They did not find out their mistake till some old wiseacre sprung this information at them. They had already made extensive preparations to settle here and for some time could not be convinced that New England was other than Virginia. Major Hyatt is a native of Virginia and consequently all roads lead there in American history. Not a bad idea, if you can prove it. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, with whom Hyatt lives, is still guying him on this, but up to date had not made any impression upon the smiling major.

YANKEE DIVISION.

Nothing But Pity for Lonely Bachelors

Editor Boston American:

Are women more independent than men? A writer came to Boston, the other day from Connecticut and declared that women are "self sufficient and independent as cats."

But with bachelors there is a different story. A batchelor hates to be alone. If he finds himself alone in his house or apartments, he thinks of a way to escape from his loneliness. He will bother "Tom, Dick and Harry" with his talk before he will be contented to be alone, unless it is time to turn in for the night.

The fact is that there is no more sorrowful sight in this world than to chance upon some old bachelor darning his socks all alone. But what a pleasing sight it is to see a spinster ripping out the seams in an old dress with the prospect of making it over with additional material and to look like new. Women of this type get along perfectly without husbands. Don't you think so?

More Noise Wanted On the Tercentenary

Editor Boston American:

A statement was made in your letter column that Boston was now waking up to the importance of the Tercentenary. This may be true in certain points, but it is not general. We ought to howl more over it, instead of writing sombre essays about the Puritans. Look at the demonstrations of their own tencentenary, that many smaller cities and towns in this state have made. Lynn, Salem, Plymouth, Gloucester, Marblehead made a good noise over their history.

To go out of New England, Trenton, N. J., settled in 1679, has let it be known when it came into existence and how one man, Mahlon Stacey, presided at its birth. Every school child in that city knows this. Nebraska is banging away at its 75th anniversary of the formation of the Nebraska Territory in 1854. As for California there is never a day passes but "Caliente Fornalla," Spanish for "hot furnace," referring to the climate, the other name for that state, makes you feel while in that state you are overwhelmed with historical gems. Boston wake up."

What Next? Now That the Earth Has a Tail

Editor Boston American:

We have just read in one edition of your paper that the naval research laboratory has made this important discovery: This earth has a tail. Of all pieces of recent news this takes the cake. It is most suggestive. One paper in commenting upon this dared to say that we, the inhabitants, may be the fleas.

Look, here, if this paper is talking about dogs you will never find fleas on their tails unless their bodies are holding a flea conference. I've taken care of dogs for years but no fleas have I found on the tail except in extreme cases. I looked upon them as outcasts.

But is this not interesting? Earth has a tail. What next! They will be saying that the moon has hazel eyes or Mars is wearing a helmet. Keep it up, laboratories! There is more to come!

India Leans On Hub for Education

Editor Boston American:

India depends for education upon Boston. Miss Doris Wells, who has been a teacher in the church school of the Old South Church, Copley sq., will be given a farewell this week in the parish house of that church, before she she starts for Chittor, India, where she will teach English in the high school of that locality.

This would mean little, if it did not bring to mind how many Boston women and men are engaged in teaching in foreign countries. They seem to like the smack of Bostonian knowledge and methods of teaching over there.

Warns Against Boosting Prices for Celebration

Editor Boston American:

The tercentenary has started in full blast in Plymouth. A few mornings ago, I swung into that town for a light breakfast. I went to one of the first class hotels. I ordered a breakfast of one corn bun, one boiled egg with a glass of water. I do not drink coffee often.

I was stung by being charged 75 cents for this meal. Silently I went out, growled to my myslef, and scraped my feet after leaving, like a dog.

Visitors to the tercentenary, watch the prices!

Business Men Helping Each Other Today

Editor Boston American:

"Every man for himself, etc., is an old adage. It has been applied in Boston among business men. It is, however, becoming a dead letter. It does not work well now and it is destined to drop into oblivion.

Why? The American Trade Association is out with a better view of trade relations. Solidarity and reciprocal assistance are the two tools to be used in modern business. There is more willingness to submerge petty self interest in the common welfare. The old time self centered merchant waging guerilla warfare, suspicious of every competitor, may be found in certain localities, but he is choking with his plans of competition, because there is a better feeling among high class business men today than ever before.

It cannot be indicated entirely in details in this letter. But it is showing itself in Boston and other places. Perhaps the principles of the American Trade Association and such organizations are the safeguards for small business.

AIR LINES TO NANTUCKET PLANNED

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

In view of the persistent demand for air transportation between New Bedford and Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, Sound Airways, Inc. of New Bedford, will inaugurate daily service June 19, according to an announcement made today by Isaac Dawson, president of the company.

The service will be started on a twice daily basis, and will be operated for a sufficient time to enable commuters to the islands to decide if it will be continued or dropped.

Dawson stated that owners of summer places on the islands and representatives of business firms have chartered the company's planes so frequently that it seems highly possible that a regular schedule to the summer resorts should be well received.

DRAW LEASES

Leases for fields on both islands are being drawn up. Edgartown, on the Vineyard, has been chosen for the stopping place before going to Nantucket.

A choice of two fields at the former place is open. Dawson and David Sher, general manager of Sound Airways, made a trip to Edgartown today to decide on the field.

Travel Air six-passenger single engined cabin monoplanes will be used for the run. These planes are powered with Wright Whirlwind motors of 300 horsepower.

RATES LOW

Rates for the run have not been fixed as yet, but will be low enough to permit the use of the line by the average pocketbook.

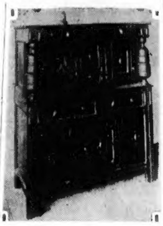
Running time for the trip will be about one hour, including the short stop at Edgartown.

It is planned at present to start the first trip in the morning after the arrival of the New York boat, with the second trip scheduled for 4 p. m.

The new line will reduce the time between the islands and the city of New Bedford by four hours one way.

DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 100



Today is shown a very unique piece of old New England furniture. It is called a court cupboard, or press cupboard, and is one of the very few American pieces of its type in existence. The cupboard is of pine throughout, and was originally owned by Gregory Stone of Cambridge, who died in 1672.

The piece remained in the Stone family for more than two centuries, and was owned about 1835 by John Stone, a famous author. It was recently purchased by Cummin C. Davis, who was instrumental in starting the collection of antique furniture which now forms the nucleus of the Concord Antiquarian Society's collection. The press cupboard is now in the new Concord Antiquarian House near the Alcott House on the outskirts of that historic Middlesex town.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of genuine antiques, particularly of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

THE DAILY HUBBUB

By ANTHONY SKELDING

RAPS C. OF C. TRAFFIC DEPARTMENT

We were talking today with a couple of our fellow scribes, Messrs. Priestly and Brehaut, editors of Boston Business, regarding the possibility of pepping up business news for popular consumption. "Consumption," is, I believe, the right word in Chamber of Commerce terminology. Anyway, we like the word . . . it has a good business ring to it. The Chamber boys are a friendly crowd, and they work in a nobby atmosphere . . . we were going to say almost swell as the foyer of the First National Bank. Period furniture, swanky rugs, artistic eagery, etc. Incidentally, the girls behind the iron grilling impressed us as being quite in keeping with the office scenery—a perfect ensemble of good taste. This much we observed as we passed along to the cubicles of the editorial department. Mr. Brehaut opened a package of cigarettes . . . we sat down (in conference).

"What are the high lights of the past week?" we asked.

Mr. Priestly passed some notes—we glimpsed the headlines—"Retail Trade Board Starts Crating and Packing Survey," "Labels and Tags of Boston Stores to Be Standardized," "Lamont Will Speak," "Statistics on Aviation," etc.

"No," we said, "it would be difficult to pep up such heavy broadsides of business news. Haven't you anything lighter?"

"Well," replied Mr. Brehaut, "now and then we get an anonymous brickbat. Here is a letter from some gent who didn't like what our traffic department had to suggest in the way of impounding illegally parked cars in downtown streets."

CHANGE OF STYLES IN TATTOO TRADE

Speaking of getting color into business, Sidney Wright, who conducts a tattooing emporium on Hanover st., informs us that public taste is improving. We visited his busy parlor the other night; up two flights of creaky stairs to a much be-plushed studio. Samples of his artistry adorned the walls—snakes, dragons, sweeties, hearts and arrows, ships, birds of all kinds—the eagle being the favorite. Over the door was a picture of a huge gila monster, a replica of which adorns some sailor's body. Mr. Wright informed us that three generations of his family had carried on the tatoo trade. His grandfather, who started the family in the business was a scenic artist and got painters' colic. He gave up paint for ink. Only the indelible fluid is used. The Wright business has flourished for 35 years. A family prestige is behind it. This Mr. Wright told us as the blue flame of his electric needles sputtered and he rolled down the sleeve of a customer's shirt.

"Yes," said Mr. Wright, "taste in the trade is changing. We are getting a lot of women customers now. They are going in for public heroes—whereas they used to ask for hearts and arrows, cupids and that sort of stuff, now they want pretty colorful flowers. We've done a few Lindberghs on the knee, too! Maybe when he is forgotten they will come back and have them taken off again. Yes, we take 'em off, too. We get a lot of college boys. They want their frat colors.

"Do we have any regular customers?" "Yes," replied Mr. Wright. "They wear one thing a few years, then get tired of it and change over to something new. We've got a big lawyer (corporation man) who comes in every year. He takes them all on the chest. Got most everything you see of these samples on the wall; done in miniature. Some beauty job! Last year he went to Europe and had a job done on both legs. He told me afterward though that he liked my work best."

"What was the biggest job you ever did?" we asked Mr. Wright.

"Circus man," he said. "We did him all over . . . even shaved his head and tattooed him there. The job cost $1100. But it was a good investment. After that he got a hundred dollars a week to do nothing but sit in a chair and let people look at him."

COW BOY CONGESTING TRAFFIC

Our advertising boys had better lookout. Competition is increasing all the time. Dakota Joe and his educated horse are on the streets again announcing fire sales and sellouts. Joe wears all the cowboy's glad regalia and insists that his mustang live up to the part. We stopped in Washington st. to feed Joe an apple (the horse has the same nom de plume as his proprietor). While Joe munched the fruit we talked with his boss.

"Did he have any difficulties in traffic?"

"Yes," said Joe (the boss not the horse). "The cops are keepin' after me all the time. My old pal can't keep up with the tempo of the traffic. But yer know a guy has to live somehow. I can't help it if the speeders keep cuttin' in ahead of me." Did he know Bill Hart? . . . Joe replied, "Say, Bill was a piker . . . I was a real cowboy! (A cop appeared.) "Say, I'll be goin' now . . ."

British Sportsmen Honor U. S. Golfers

London, May 20 (AP)—The Daily Mail said today that Miss Glenna Collett, other American women golfers who are in England nad the American Walker cup team will be entertained by the British Sportsmen's Club in London, Wednesday, at luncheon. The Prince of Wales will be present.

Miss Diana Fishwick, British women's champion, and other prominent persons have been invited.

OIL HEAT BLAST AT AIRPORT

Explosion of the oil heater in the building of Colonial Airways, Inc., at the Boston airport today wrecked the heater and blew out a door and a window. The cause was undetermined.

John Murphy, the janitor, had just passed in front of the heater when it blew up and the door flew past him.

Appeal to Boston Police to Identify Mystery Girl

Philadelhpia police are trying to locate the parents of a girl, apparently of wealth, who turned up in that city on May 1, but has thus far been unable to identify herself.

They have appealed to Chief Inspector Ainsley C. Armstrong of Boston for help as they believe the girl to be from Massachusetts, possibly a resident of a Boston suburb.

She is described as about 16 years old, five feet three inches tall and weighing 110 pounds. She has black eyes and dark brown hair. She appears to be mentally deficient and was wandering aimlessly around the streets in Philadelphia when found.

The girl says that when she left home she had long hair, although it is now bobbed.

Tomy Gold is the only name the girl can give for herself. She is not sure of her name saying that it is Gold, Vandergold or Feingold. She knows neither their Christian names or post office address.

RESCUE FLEET IN FLOOD AREA

Little Rock, Ark., May 20 (AP)—Organized on a broad scale by the Red Cross, relief expeditions prepared to take a fleet of motor boats into two separate areas in Southern Arkansas to rescue the marooned residents who had failed to flee before the onrush of flood waters.

It is estimated 1000 families already have been concentrated in refugee camps along the Ouachita river and Smackover creek.

PHANTOM ROBS ANOTHER HOME

The "phantom burglar," with a long series of breaks in the Lawrence estates section of Medford to his discredit, successfully perpetrated another last night, garnering loot valued at $400 from under the noses of three plain clothes officers on special duty in the district.

He ransacked the home of Thomas H. Byrne, 42 Whitney rd., taking a diamond ring valued at $250, a watch worth $75 and several articles of men's clothing.

The British girl, who is trying to lower the London-Australia flight record, said her engine had functioned irregularly, probably because of a leakage in a fuel pipe.

PICTURE CLUE NO. 10 IN TOMORROW'S BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

By IRENE A. O'DONNELL

(The Boston Evening American's staff correspondent with the pilgrimage to Carthage describes in this, her second letter, the call of the party aboard the S. S. Rochambeau at Algiers.)

Algiers, May 4 (By mail)—Into the harbor here we sailed last night, at the most opportune of times. The city was celebrating the 100th anniversary of French rule, and as we approached we beheld the harbor filled with dreadnaughts, airplane carriers, destroyers and submarines, with banners flying and bands playing. All Algiers was in gala attire.

At night we shopped, keeping close to each other, each with an eye to the shop windows and the other to the fezzed Arabs, who viewed us from all sides. Arab women flitted about in haicks of pure silk, with veiled faces, many bracelets, and gaily colored shoes.

The stores in this "Paris of Africa" we found a delight. They ranged from the cheapest and most squalid of stalls to the most exclusive of French shops. The buildings, of which there were many modern and beautiful ones, were festooned, and the parks twinkled with fairy like lights, and turbaned sheiks strolled the boulevards. "The wickedest city" in the world was prepared to receive its ruler.

After mass Sunday we were escorted through the real Arab Quarter.

Battles Arabs

Miss Irene A. O'Donnell, who was rescued by a Canadian priest from an Arab mob in Algiers when she became separated from the Boston pilgrims. She describes the experience graphically in today's Boston Evening American.

LOST IN ALGIERS

We had been warned to stay close together, but such advice was entirely unnecessary—we not only "stuck," we "clung." Down 700 steps from the heights to the depths. Such squalor and filth, and beggars!

It was all too horrible to describe; meat hanging rotting in the doorways, garbage piled high in the alleys and sewage running in the streets. Although we picked our way carefully, more than one pair of dainty slippers were consigned that night to the rippling bay of Algiers.

When about half way down the seemingly endless flight of steps, I stopped for a moment to snap the picture of a really sweet-featured Arab girl of about six years. As I bent over the camera, she grabbed for my pendant with one hand, striking me sharply across the back with the other. More frightened than hurt, I turned to join my party, which to my horror was nowhere in sight! Arabs crowded around on all sides, in shorter time than it takes to tell. They closed in on me, forcing me to the wall, shaking their fists and gesticulating wildly. Not a familiar thing or face within range, except a basket of new potatoes and a bunch of scallions!

SAVED FROM MOB

The next thing I remember was some one taking me by the arm, and I raised my eyes to the most welcome face in the world, that of a burly six foot Canadian Oblate Father from Ottawa.

"I, too, am lost, Madam," said he in broken English, "and I think it is the best thing to do is to run!

And run we did, down flight after flight of stairs, I clutching tightly to the priest's coat sleeve. Through the most intricate of passages we sped, the Arabs in their amazement drawing back from our path, until we saw before us the "Orphanage de St. Vincent de Paul."

There we stopped and sank to the bench exhausted. Then we laughed; I a bit hysterically, no doubt; for though I shall never know whether we were really in any grave danger, the experience will always be anything but a pleasant memory.

Our next visits were to the Cathedral of St. Phillip on the site of the Mosque of the Ket-Shawa, the National Library, the Legations, the Governor's Palace and the Archbishop's House, where some of our Boston party, including Mrs. J. G. Joyce, prominent member of the League of Catholic Women, the Misses Margaret and Helen Malvey of Brighton, Miss Beatrice Flanagan of Roxbury, Miss Donovan of Roslindale and myself, were fortunate enough to meet Archbishop Sipeau.

SEE FRENCH CHIEF

The Archbishop had as his guest Archbishop Forbes of Ottawa, who had come on for the congress.

We returned to the boat just in time to see President Domergue arriving with his staff on the Du Quesne.

After luncheon and rosary, some of the Boston clergymen, including Fr. Brewin, Fr. Duggan, Fr. Killion, Fr. Desmond, Fr. Foley, Fr. Chamberlain, Fr. Linnehan, Fr. O'Connor and Fr. Keenan, motored to the monastery of the White Fathers, some twelve miles out of the city, and spent a pleasant hour at Maison Caret. The fathers, who dress as much like the natives as possible in order to meet with greater success in their work, are doing a great work among the Arabs and Turks.

One of the fathers came originally from Brockton, and he was much disappointed that none of the visitors were from that city; he wanted so much to see a familiar face.

Others of the party visited Notre Dame d'Afrique, via the antiquated trolley. Here, on a most beautiful promontory stands the statue of the "Black Virgin" before which we witnessed the ceremony of the "Blessing of the Sea" after solemn benediction.

Some of the most unpleasant memories of Algiers are the beggars and fakirs. Everywhere one comes upon them; the latter changing prices for every customer. They followed us to the boat, bargaining from their skiffs to those on deck, and as the whistle blew for our departure, one irate Turk tossed me a lovely scarf, for which I had bargained without success from the Bois de Boulogne to the wharf.

'May Allah condemn me to the bottom of the sea," he called after me, "if I ever again sell a thing so cheap."

The shawl for which he originally asked 600 francs, I finally got for $2.50.

Daughter Is Sponsor for Yacht

Miss Camilla Warren Officiates at Launching of New Craft for Bayard Warren

BAYARD WARREN'S NEW yacht Camilla was launched last week at Lawley's shipyard, sponsored by Mr. Warren's second daughter, Miss Camilla. The young girl, in her eagerness to see the vessel slide down the ways, broke the bottle a few minutes ahead of time. However, the beautiful craft took the water successfully. Mrs. Bayard Tuckerman, aunt of Miss Warren, former Commodore Herbert M. Sears, her grandfather, and several others from the North Shore stood with the young sponsor, while below stood John S. Lawrence of the Yankee and Capt. Muir of the Whirlwind. Mr. Warren and his elder daughter, Lillian, took the dip into the waves with the Camilla.

MISS BARBARA RICE AND Mr. George Lowell Aspinwall were married yesterday at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. William Munroe Rice of 34 Cederlane way. The Rev. Abbott Paterson performed the ceremony at high noon. Mr. James Arnold Lowell, Jr., of Chestnut Hill, the bridegroom's cousin, was best man. Miss Rice had no attendants, and only the immediate family were present. Mr. Aspinwall, a Harvard '14 graduate, the son of the late William Henry Aspinwall and Susan Cabot Lowell Aspinwall, makes his home at the Lowell place on Hammond st., Chestnut Hill, and it is here that he and his bride will be at home after June 1. The bride is a member of the Vincent Club and Junior League.

Miss Mary E. Altemus and John H. Whitney Join Engaged Group

MISS MARY ELIZABETH ALTEMUS of Philadelphia has announced her engagement to Mr. John Hay Whitney of New York, prominent young turfman. Miss Altemus, who made her debut in 1923, is the daughter of Mrs. Bessie Dobson Altemus Eastman and has won many prizes at horse shows, at which she has sometimes ridden Mr. Whitney's horses. She is a polo player, like her fiance, and also a dog fancier. Her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Dobson, married Samuel Riddle, owner of Man o' War. Three Women Give Chautauqua Fund Total of $380,000

Three women whose interest in the many sided development of Chautauqua Institution as an American center of culture, recreation and learning, has mounted to expression through generosity, have made gifts totalling some $380,000 with which to carry out such a program.

This announcement was made today by Dr. Arthur E. Bestor, institutional president.

Mrs. C. M. Wilkes of Chicago gave $100,000 in her will; a gift of similar amount was reported from Mrs. Thomas A. Edison and other members of the Miller family in memory of Lewis Miller, co-founder with Bishop John H. Vincent of Chautauqua Institution, and a gift of $180,000 from Mrs. O. W. Norton of Chicago for the erection of Norton Memorial Hall where programs of symphonic, operatic and chamber music willl be presented this summer.

Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the Chautauqua Woman's Club, and former president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs considers the gifts as "the finest tribute that could be offered to the thoroughness of the Chautauqua program in the development of its broad national appeal. It draws the attention of the country at large to the invaluable service Chautauqua is rendering to woman."

Women go to Chautauqua for serious study and research, clubwomen particularly, seeking the culture that comes to them during the Chautauqua Women's Club week.

This year the week will start June 30, and already signed up for lectures are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation, who was Massachusetts' special guest the past week; Mrs. Charles J. Reeder, president, New York Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. John Hanna, president, National Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. W. B. Alvord, press chairman, General Federation, and Mrs. Pennybacker.

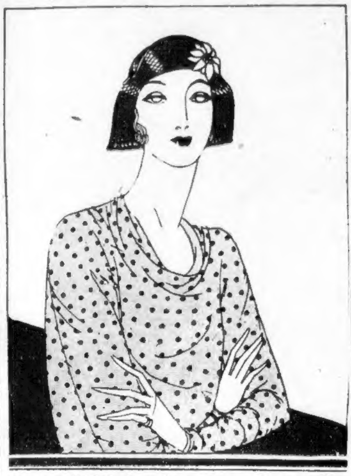
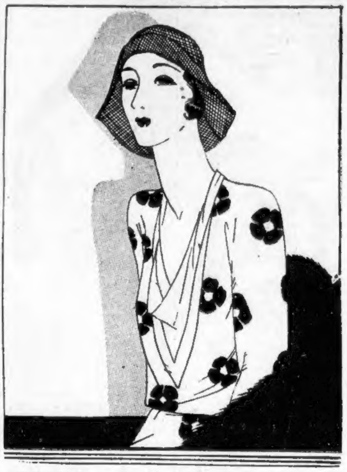
Small Hat Is Favored for All Daytime Wear



BLACK PANAMALAC offering by Agnes, with large white velvet flower resembling a huge edelweiss and very suitable with suit of classic tailleur type. (Sketched in Paris.)



PINK NIMPO is used in this creation offered by Agnes. It is a soft silky straw, with brim turned back off the face. Hat is untrimmed, relying on fancy weave. (Sketched in Paris.)

From Paris Bureau, Boston Evening American

Paris, May 20.

The piquant little hat continues to score, however many hats of the elaborate or picture type are offered for our approval. Women of pronounced chic generally declare themselves in favor of the small hat with clever detail as their choice for all daytime wear. And certainly with simple frocks and suits such chapeaux have more to recommend them than the floppy or wide-brimmed type of headwear.

Even if a hat is quite small it can still be big with smartness, and a brim can be so treated that without being much in evidence it is unmistakably a brim.

These small smart hats are an interesting feature of most of the leading milliners here, who this season offer such hats in pleasing variety despite the emphasis placed on the large hat.

Knowing that women everywhere are ever interested in the latest ideas of Agnes, we are sending you sketches of two of her very newest models. The first is quite obviously of tricorne inspiration and is offered in black panamalac. The conventional cockade of the classic tricorne is replaced in this model by a large white velvet flower resembling a huge edelweiss. Such a hat would be ideal with a suit of the classic tailleur type.

The other hat is on rather a more elaborate order, and Agnes has made it of pink nimpo, which is a soft, silky straw with a fancy weave that seems destined for quite some popularity as it is very light and comfortable.

The brim, which is turned back off the face, flares at the sides and dips over the neck in back. Additional smartness is obtained by the pleat at one side. The hat is entirely untrimmed, relying on the fancy weave of the straw for ornamentation.

SENATOR IN TILT WITH DRY HEAD

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Charging that F. Scott McBride of the Anti-Saloon League was not being "candid," Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin, today adjourned the session of the Senate lobby committee until tomorrow after an argument with McBride.

Blaine was the only committee member present. He insisted that McBride refused to answer his questions concerning a "score card" prepared by the South Dakota League for grading candidates for office.

At one point Blaine said it "might be necessary to call a sergeant to enforce order."

When McBride indicated reluctance to answer a number of persons in the audience applauded. Pointing to one Blaine asked that he stand and give his name. The man was William D. Upshaw, former Democratic representative from Georgia, a dry.

"If you expect to get off this witness stand this summer," Blaine told McBride, "you had beter answer the questions."

He added that he was going to insist on answers.

"Don't get warmed up," McBride countered.

"You may bulldoze members of Congress," Blaine asserted, "but I hope by this time you have found I will not be bulldozed."

The police operators who handle these calls speak these languages fluently, Capt. G. F. Moran announced today.

GALLANT DYING, SUSPECT HELD

William J. Barry, 39, of Waldron rd., Braintree, is dying at City Hospital, a victim of a chivalrous desire to protect a girl from insult.

Joseph Murowski, 35, of Clapp st., South Boston, is under arrest for assault and battery.

Miss Carmella Labadessa, 26, of 85 St Andrew rd., East Boston, an employe of a South Boston insurance office, was the innocent cause of the trouble, according to the police.

Barry was in the Broadway office of the insurance company when Murowski entered and asked Miss Labadessa to make a change in his policy.

Because the change would violate a company rule the girl refused, and, the police allege, Murowski unleased a flood of billingsgate which brought a protest from Barry.

Murowski is said to have resented the other's interference and invited him outside. He left the office and a short time later Barry, who is the father of four children, followed.

Police charge that Murowski struck Barry, who fell, hitting his head against the curb. He was found unconscious. Barry, police say, later identified Murowski as his assailant.

Seek Pension for Patrolman's Widow

Jail Doors Close Behind Kent for Seven Years—Anne in Tears

BIG House Gates Yawn

"Here y're, Kid, right at the door of the Big House," declared the deputy as the door swung wide. As the doors swung it brought Kent to a new depth of despair.

In the first chapter of "The Big House" we meet Duncan Morgan, a good-looking young man who was sent to jail for his third "stretch." Morgan was a robber. He got away with crimes for a while, but the cops were too fast for him. Next we meet Dean Ward Kent. On a wild New Year's eve party his drunken driving results in a terrible smashup.

CHAPTER 2

A policeman comes on the run. Two more, in a department flivver, are hurrying over. They look first into the upset limousine. There, senseless, are an elderly couple in evening clothes and a chauffeur in uniform. One of the cops rushes off to call ambulances. A motorcycle patrolman comes shrieking and screeching up. He opens the right-hand door of Kent's car. He plays his flashlight on the inside. Anne is moaning, her face and shoulders all cut up. Kent is completely out, his hands still on the wheel. Manners, shaky and chattering, says:

"Pretty bad b-bump, I [illegible]s."

The mountie doesn't answer. He walks around, tears open the door at Kent's side, smells the driver's breath.

"Thought so—ossified!"

"For God's sake, officer," blubbers Manners, "tear that away from this girl—she's hurt—bad!"

The policeman gets a tool from his motorcycle and strains at the warped body-metal of the car imprisoning and piercing Alda. He frees her, takes her by the wrist. He holds it, then puts his head on her breast. He keeps it there, lifts it an inch, puts it back again, holds it some more. He raises his head, takes off his cap, raises his eyes on high, and hoarsely utters:

"God have mercy on her soul."

"No!" cries Manners, hysterically. "No!"

"Gone," the man in blue says, solemnly. "Dead."

The jury files in after deliberating for eleven heart wrenching hours. Kent jerks up spasmodically. Anne, seated back in the spectators' section, strains forward. Her face still bears the unhealed evidences of what the jury has been weighing. Beside her, Art Manners, who can never forgive the death of his sweetheart, mutters something. Anne puts her hand on his, lightly, and whispers:

"What good can that do? It won't bring Alda back. He didn't mean——"

"Gentlemen," says the court, "have you arrived at a verdict?"

The foreman, a retail shoe-dealer, honest, earnest and shaking under the tension of what he has had to do and what he has yet to do, clears his throat and answers:

"We have, your honor—we——"

"Have you found a verdict?"

"We have, your honor."

"Pronounce it."

The blood-shot eyes of Dean Kent are burning him.

"Guilty!" he says, loud and clear, "of manslaughter."

Kent chokes back a sob. He hangs to the arms of his maple-wood chair. His lawyer is up on his feet. He is making a motion. The judge scarcely hears him out.

"Denied," he says, without a down glance. Turning to the jury, he says, "Thank you. You are dismissed." To the lawyer he says, "I will entertain a motion for appeal after sentence—let me see—(he consults his schedule on a form) next Tuesday morning at 11 . . . clerk, bond cancelled on the defendant, bailiff, take him in custody and confine him in jail . . . court adjourned."

Jail Ahead

Anne Sympathizes

Kent can scarcely get up. His half-healed injuries, the breaking of the horrible suspense, the calamitous verdict—he is dizzy, his feet cannot find the floor. Anne come forward to attempt a word of sympathy, courage. An attendant bars her with stiff, horizontal arm. Kent is led through the back door.

Tears trickle down Anne's checks and are salt in their wounds.

She has never deeply loved Kent. But now she sympathizes with him profoundly. She cannot bring herself to see him as a criminal, she who almost paid with her life for his drunken recklessness, she who had urged him against it. That is all over now. He is still a boy, in his early twenties. Life had so much to give him and to promise him until that one deadly second of that fateful night of whoopee. He should be punished, yes—but not—not as she hears the judge, on that next Tuesday morning pronounce the judgment of the State:

"Stand up, young man . . . you have been found guilty of a heinous felony. By your rash act, you have caused the death of two persons and dangerously hurt five others . . . it was not your intent, I am sure . . . but it is an ancient principle of the law that drunkenness is no excuse for breaking the law, in fact it is now breaking the law to be drunk

$5000 LOSS IN HUB YACHT CLUB FIRE

Fire early today and a rekindling several hours later caused $4000 to $5000 damage to the Boston Yacht Club at Rowe's wharf, Atlantic ave.

The rekindling made it necessary to call the firemen again, but the new blaze was confined to the garret and roof with small additional loss.

Had the fire, kept to the fourth floor and garret, spread into the trophy room at the front of the clubhouse, the loss would have been considerably greater.

One article of value damaged was a model of the barkentine Herbert A. Fuller, aboard which Mate Thomas Bram, on the night of July 14, 1896, was accused of slaying Capt. Charles A. Nash, his wife and Mate August Blomberg with an axe.

Mate Bram was tried in Boston found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. He obtained a new trial but again was found guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment at Atlanta. In 1919, however, President Wilson pardoned him.

The fire was discovered by Jack F Sullivan, assistant wharf agent of the Nantasket steamship line. He notified Patrolman John M Murphy of the Milk st. station. Murphy sounded an alarm from box 1294.

Engine 44, the fire boat, stationed at Northern ave., responded and played several streams on the blaze. Sparks from the burning building fell on the property of the Nantasket steamship line and also on the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad wharf, but were quickly extinguished. Rain assisted materially in keeping the fire from spreading.

When informed that the fire had done approximately $3000 damage to the quarters of the club, William W. Nichols, of Marblehead, president, said cups, shields and medals won by the club totalled over $5000 in value.

32 Flee Suspicious North End Fire

A fire, under investigation by state and city authorities, caused 32 persons in eight families to flee the five-story brick building at 453 Hanover st., North End, today.

Flames originated and were confined in the periodical store of Paul Pomano on the first floor, but a dense smoke rolled through the upper floor tenements. The loss was $2000.

Deputy Fire Chief John F. McDonough reported to the police that the fire was of a suspicious nature and that he smelled banana oil on the premises. Police and the state fire marshal are co-operating in the probe.

Fire in Garage as Still Explodes

Explosion of a still set fire to the second floor of a 10-car garage in Cherry st., Cambridge, near the Robert school, today.

The blast blew out several windows in the two-story brick and wood structure, but firemen extinguished the flames before they caused much damage. Police seized 35 gallons of moonshine, 400 gallons of mash and paraphernalia.

Treasured Trophies of the Sea Charred by Flames

Nash, his wife and Mate August Blomberg. Mate Bram was sentenced to be hanged, won a new trial, was found guilty again, sentenced to life imprisonment, and in 1919 was pardoned by President Wilson. Model was damaged when flames swept the clubhouse at Rowe's Wharf. At right, cup won by schooner Adrienne in 1884 and 1885 is held by Walter Burgess, secretary of the club. It was saved from the flames. (Staff photo.)

Club Women Urged on to Use the Ballot

By NANCY BREWSTER

"We are too comfortable and well fed to do [illegible] best work with our newly acquired weapon—the ballot."

As part of a stirring message, Mrs. Mary Tenney Healy, president of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters, opened the tenth anniversary convention at the Hotel Commander, Cambridge, today, with an outline for ensuing years and a challenge to every woman who has the franchise.

Agreeing that the criticism that "American women are too soft" Mrs. Healy also held that American women, when compared with women in European countries who have the franchise, appear at a disadvantage.

"But the fitness of women to engage successfully in political activity has been proven," she said, "by the increasing number of women who are gaining both elective and appointive jobs."

The official session followed the luncheon tendered those Massachusetts women whose names have been placed on the Roll of Honor. Over this festive occasion, Mrs Robert L. De Normandie presided. She announced that the National League of Women Voters had raised $115,000 for the permanent memorial to which amount Massachusetts women voters had contributed $7000.

The afternoon program opened with greetings from Mrs. Henry Randolph Brigham, Cambridge League president, and Mayor Richard Russell of Cambridge.

Mrs. Healy told the women that to reach the results aimed at in legislation they must go back to educating the electorate rather than spend time trying to persuade persistently antagonistic legislators.

NEW STATE AUTO INSURANCE

Rep. Martin Hays, of Boston, gave notice in the House today that he would file a bill providing for the formation of a state automobile insurance company.

His announcement, following the supreme court decision that such a company as suggested in the bill of Frank A. Goodwin would be unconstitutional, caused considerable conjecture at the State House.

The Brighton legislator said he would file his bill when the joint insurance committee makes its report recommending no further legislation on motor vehicle insurance.

The company he contemplates would set lower compulsory rates that at present in effect, Rep. Hays said. It would handle any auto insurance that mutual companies may now write and would have a board of three directors to be named by the insurance commissioner.

SEEK FUNDS FOR PENSION BILL

The Senate committee on ways and means today reported out a new draft of the old-age assistance bill which passed the House.

Under the proposed new bill the commissioner of taxation would investigate methods of raising revenue to provide adequate old age assistance and report to the legislature on Dec 1 next.

The measure suggests that the commissioner study sources of revenue which so far as may be will not constitute an added burden on real estate and shall especially consider some form of taxation relative to amusements proprietary articles and luxuries.

BABE RUTH AIDS DWYER FUND

Babe Ruth's baseball autographing and the [illegible] of five Red Sox players at the Dorchester Town Field benefit game yesterday added $168.50 to the Board of Trade fund being raised for the widow and three children of slain Patrolman Franklin B. Dwyer. The fund total is $1,412.62, which, added to the police department collection makes a total of $5107.12 already collected. A benefit performance will be given at the Fields Corner Publix Theater on midnight of May 29.

M.D.C. SCORED BY SENATOR MULHERN

Ways and Means Committee Finds It Has to Settle a Medical Argument

Pleading for the reinstatement of a pension or an annuity to the widow and two children of Patrolman Michael F. Cadegan, Jr., of the Metropolitan district police, Senator Joseph J. Mulhern of Dorchester today denounced the action of the commission for stopping the pension at the time of the man's death.

Speaking before the House ways and means committee, Mulhern, who brought about the Garrett probe, declared:

"I could criticise the Metropolitan District Commission just as severely as the Boston police department. They can't continue long doing acts of this kind."

HURT IN COLLISION

Mulhern said the patrolman, who lived in Dorchester, died from the effects of injuries received when the motorcycle he was operating was in collision with an automobile in June, 1919, and a pension was granted in August, 1920. Up to the time of his death, in 1927, he said, Cadegan was in various hospitals or under constant treatment at his home.

He introduced a certificate from Medical Examiner Timothy Leary saying the cause of death, angina pectoris, came from a chest injury sustained in the accident.

ARGUE BOTH WAYS

Davis B. Keniston, chairman of the metropolitan district commission, explained that the pension was revoked following the report of the commission's physician that angina pectoris could not come from the injuries received in the accident.

Keniston explained, however, that one of the doctors in the state health department with whom he had talked was of the opinion medical testimony on this question was not helpful to the committee, as it could be argued both ways.

PRESIDENT SEES NAVY REVIEW

Aboard U. S. S. Saratoga, at sea off Virginia Capes, May 20 (AP)—Its flags whipping in a smart breeze as it ploughed a calm blue sea into foam, the United States fleet passed in review today before its commander-in-chief, President Hoover.

Standing uncovered at the rail of the new cruiser Salt Lake City, on which he had put out from Old Point Comfort, the President saw a great modern armada of the sea and air pass in line and circle in maneuver. Overhead the giant dirigible Los Angeles floated in silvery majesty, the center of a roaring squadron of the skies. All about her were the fighting planes loosed from their hives on the aircraft carriers Saratoga and Lexington.

On the surface the passing line included the proudest of the battleships, swift cruisers and destroyers, and half-submerged subarines.

TWO KILLED AT LOWELL WEDDING

Man on Trial Declared He Was Sorry for Death of Second Victim

Joaquin P. Soaris, 30, of Paterson, N. J., on trial in Middlesex Superior Court for double murder, showed no remorse over the alleged slaying of Angelina Rodrigues, 17, according to testimony today.

Anthony Gomes of Floyd st. Lowell, bridegroom at whose wedding reception in Lowell the double killing occurred, said Soaris expressed pity only for Matilda Silva 10, flower girl, also murdered.

The government contends that Soaris, in a rage because Angelina Rodrigues had spurned his attentions, fired into an automobile in which she was sitting, killing her, the Silva girl and wounding the driver.

SAW LETTER GIRL WROTE

Under cross-examination by Atty. James J. Cannon, Gomez said he saw a letter written by Angelina to Soaris in which she said she was too young to marry and did not know if she loved him.

He admitted there were three gallons of wine at the wedding reception, some beer and half a gallon of annisette, but no moonshine. The defendant drank some wine, he said, and left for the railroad station, to return later saying he had lost his train.

After the shooting, Gomez testified, the defendant sent for him from the hospital and begged his pardon for what had happened. He said Soaris said he was sorry for shooting the Silva girl, but otherwise had no regrets.

The witness testified that he went outside the house at 7 o'clock and saw Angelina sitting in an automobile parked at the curb with Soaris standing beside the machine. He said he heard no talk, but suddenly heard a report and saw the flash of a gun. The defendant offered no resistance when Gomez seized him after the killings, the witness said.

He denied knowing anything about or participating in administering a beating to Soaris.

Mrs. Maria Rodrigues of Fifth st. Lowell, mother of one of the slain girls, testified she had met the defendant only once when he went to the house to see Angeline, who refused to see him. She said Angelina told her she did not want to marry Soaris.

START CRUISE ON THURSDAY

At the Navy Yard in Charlestown today a crew of bustling sailors are hard at work preparing the veteran training ship Nantucket for her annual 12,500-mile cruise.

The Nantucket, official schoolship of the Massachusetts Nautical Training School, expects to get under way Thursday with more than 100 youths who are choosing the sea as their careers.

Spain, Sicily, Greece, the Azores, the Isle of Crete, Egypt, Valetta, Madeira and other points will be viewed by the boys ere they touch this port again.

And the training in the approximately four months cruise will start many toward their course on the sea, while others, members of the graduating class, will complete their study with a knowledge that will entitle them to examination for under officer licenses on merchant ships.

The course is not easy. No boy is allowed to shirk what with splicing of hawsers, manning the pumps, heaving the lead, scrubbing of decks and the other innumerable tasks that confront the embryo sailor.

Boat drills under the health sun will send back a crew of well developed youths, while the technical appliances aboard will offer them the opportunity for the mental training that the times have forced on men of ships.

The ship is due back in October, the trip to be followed with the graduation of a score or more who will qualify for the honors.

HOUSE VOTES TO DELAY ACTION ON TAX BILL

Ways and Means Committee Demands Another Year's Study of Problem

Disregarding public pressure for income and general taxation relief from all parts of the State this year, the House today, on the recommendation of its ways and means committee, voted, 103 to 30, for another year's study of the whole problem.

Representative Joseph E. Perry, one of the special committee which investigated the subject for two years, urged the passage of the general revision tax bill.

Two-thirds of the taxes of the state now are carried, he said, by one-sixth of the property, less than 10 per cent being on intangibles.

"Because this bill plays equality instead of favorites so many people object to this bill," he stated.

Representative William M. McMorrow of Boston, member of the special commission, registered his opposition to any lowering of the exemption now given to single men.

In making his final argument against delay in accepting the bill, Rep. Perry warned the House that a vote against the bill was a vote for special privilege to the wealthy at the cost of the workingmen.

Representative Arthur W. Jones of Nantucket, chairman of the House ways and means committee, complained that the bill was rushed before his committee in the closing days of the session and that he doubted if any measure of such length and importance should be passed without the fullest deliberation.

LAUD UNKNOWN DEAD OF '61

Memorial services for the unknown dead of the Civil War were held today in Boston harbor and at Deer Island.

Various patriotic organizations and their auxiliaries participated under the direction of Mrs. Marie E. Bateman, who for the past 25 years has sponsored the annual affair.

The water services were held from the deck of the Michael J. Perkins, penal institutions steamer.

The party of more than 60 was landed at Deer Island and decorated the graves of the veterans' cemetery with wreaths and flags.

Special attention was given to the cross under which lies an unknown hero of the Civil War.

Accompanying the party were William G. O'Hare, penal institutions commissioner; James E. McGuire of the penal institutions department; Lieut. G. F. Heaney of Fort Banks; Henry C. McKenna, chief probation officer of the Superior court, representing the World War veterans, and W. W. McGrath of the Knights of Columbus.

Corinne Griffith, like 9 out of 10 other stars, uses Lux Toilet Soap

"A SCREEN STAR must pass the most merciless test. But the owner of a skin which can pass the close-up test has the support of an immense adoring public."

So says William A. Seiter, prominent First National director, summing up what 45 leading Hollywood directors have found out from their experience with motion pictures.

"The great close-up lights find out even the slightest flaw in the skin," he goes on to say. "No beauty is more important to a girl than alluring smooth skin."

It is because alluringly smooth skin is so vital for success on the screen that of the 521 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 511 are simply devoted to Lux Toilet Soap. And all the great film studios have made it the official soap for their dressing rooms.

The Broadway stage stars are equally enthusiastic about this soap, so daintily fragrant and white. And now, too, the screen stars of the European capitals have adopted Lux Toilet Soap! To keep their skin as faultlessly smooth as the American stars keep theirs.

You will love the way it keeps your skin silken-smooth! And such generous lather as it gives, even in very hard water! Order several cakes of Lux Toilet Soap—today.

MOVE TO RAISE $300,000 TO AID BOSTON TERCENTENARY FUND

BIG LIGHTING PROJECT IS PLANNED

Fitzgerald Tells Celebration Leaders the Time Is Ripe to Collect Money for Needs

Following a declaration by ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald that the First National Bank is ready to start public subscription of a $300,000 fund for the general needs of the Tercentenary organization, the executive committee today voted to indorse solicitation of this fund.

Fitzgerald, as chariman of the executive committee, asserted also that leading business men and financiers have agreed to lend their financial aid. He was authorized by the executive committee to appoint a finance committee.

"The time is ripe to ask the public to contribute," said the former mayor. "This will be the greatest celebration in Boston's history, but we cannot carry out our plans without the $300,000. The sooner we are assured of this money, the more satisfactory will be the arrangements.

"We must depend chiefly on the business interests, although everybody in Boston will be urged to contribute."

Boston is awakening to the fact that real energy and intelligence are being exerted to make the celebration a worthy one, he said, and Massachusetts is receiving excellent publicity throughout the country for its 300th birthday.

More than 5000 school children will take part in a pageant at Fenway Park on June 10, and there will be a rowing regatta on the Charles river at the end of July, the committee was informed.

The committee voted, subject to approval of the mayor, an appropriation of $25,000 for the city's share of decorative illumination of the river banks and bridges, for which former Lieut.-Gov. Edward P. Barry has obtained an appropriation of $10,000 from the state and the co-operation of Technology, Harvard and business concerns.

The committee also voted to adopt decorative plans outlined by Horace Guild, which include electric emblems at the North and South stations, City Hall, the old State House and Faneuil hall; arches at the Park st. entrance to the Common, the two main entrances to the Public Garden, Copley sq., and on Commonwealth ave.; illumination of various monuments and decoration of 1000 streets with bunting and streamers.

Death Certificate Signed by Leary

A death certificate, stating that Mrs. Ella George, 40, of 2 Columbus sq., South End, died from acute indigestion, was signed today by Medical Examiner Timothy Leary of the Southern district.

Her body was turned over to a sister, Ada McPherson of 46 Concord sq., South End. Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. from the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

Because the physician called to her home when she was ill had not attended her previously, he could not sign a death certificate without a verdict by the medical examiner.

Curley Thanked for Water Work Fight

Mayor Curley was thanked today by Asst. Atty.-Gen. R. Ammi Cutter for his letter to the United States Senate opposing the amendment proposed by Senator Walcott of Connecticut to the rivers and harbors bill, which would have prohibited Massachusetts from using the waters of the Swift and Ware rivers for the Boston metropolitan drinking supply. The Mayor's letter was of great assistance in creating opinion favorable to Massachusetts among the committee members, Cutter said.

METEORS DUE TO RAIN DOWN ON MAY 29

Harvard Observatory Director Tells of Jap Expert's Discovery of Pending Display

If the predictions of Prof. Yamamoto of the Observatory at Kyoto, Japan, are correct, the inhabitants of the northern hemisphere will be given the treat of observing a meteoric shower about May 29, according to announcement today by Prof. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory.

Word of the expected "heavenly fireworks" was received in a cablegram from Prof. Stromgren of Copenhagen, Denmark. Bradley 1174, a star in the orbit of the new Schwassman Wachmann comet, the fourth to be discovered in 1930, is the one from which the meteors will be radiated.

The Schwassman-Wachman comet, in the constellation of Camelo-Pardalis, was discovered by Prof. Van Biesbroeck, director of the Yerkes observatory, connected with the University of Chicago, at Williams Bay, Wis.

According to Harvard officials, Prof. Yamamoto expects the earth to pass through the orbit of the Schwassman Wachmann comet about May 29. If this occurs at night the whole northern hemisphere should be able to see the show.

OFFICER FREED IN DRUNK CASE

On recommendation of Police Chief Walter Reeves of Swampscott, a charge of drunken driving against Patrolman John Crawford of Station 7, East Boston, was dismissed without trial today in Lynn district court.

Patrolman Crawford, who lives at 122 Saratoga st., East Boston, was arrested on May 7. His car crashed through a fence on the Swampscott estate of William Jeffrey.

Chief Reeves told Judge Ralph W. Reeve he had five policemen who would testify Patrolman Crawford was not drunk and four civilians and the special officer who made the arrest who would testify he was drunk.

Patrick Henry Quoted Again in Mystery

Patrick Henry

About the time Benjamin Franklin retired from business in Philadelphia, Patrick Henry was a boy rambling about the woods in Virginia. No Indian liked better to be out of doors. Some people thought Patrick spent too much time in this way, and, indeed, he had little schooling.

Nevertheless as he was a bright boy, he managed to pick up a fair education. At 15 he started clerking in a country store, and the next year his father bought a farm for Patrick and his brother, but it was a failure. At 18 the future famed orator married, and ere long the union was blessed with a child.

After a few years of poverty and failure he took up the study of law at home, passed the examination and was admitted to the bar. Soon his keen intelligence and oratorical powers won for him considerable prominence in his native state, Virginia, and when delegates were chosen to attend the first Continental Congress in Philadelphia Henry was among them.

The interest of Boston Evening American readers in these mysterious messages is equally divided between the educational benefits and the desire to share in the many handsome awards.

The Mystery Messenger broadcasts his ninth message tomorrow and this time the picture clue will, he says, need quite a bit of study.

He warns everyone not to miss a single one of his broadcasts from now on as he will make some very important announcements soon.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

BY DEVICES calculated to lift the hair and put chills on the spine, you knew at a glance that "Spook House" was not misnamed. It was author's night at the Tremont and a crowded house was the response given to Joe Byron Totten's invitation to take the measure of the newest thriller at nothing higher than one dollar. Few, if any, of the popular tricks of the theater for making an audience squirm were omitted.

Nicholas Young

THERE WERE SECRET passages, secret panels and green "spots"; murder almost became commonplace; blows were struck in the dark and a dead body moved itself from room to room with ghastly [illegible]. About the only missing article of any importance was the revolving door. These were merely the mechanical details. When Mr. Totten got fairly started on his story things began to happen to every member of a cast of eleven people. The host of a Westchester card party was murdered in his own living room, the police poured in and then you had two and a half hours of criminal investigation by deep chested men from headquarters. Who killed Philip Haynes remained a mystery to the last. In the meantime the audience was not left without hope or without surprises.

WHATEVER its shortcomings, "Spook House" proved rich fare for those who like to test their nerves in a playhouse and pay for it. The narrative, still [illegible] accompanied by manifold [illegible] rather laid a heavy strain upon your credulity, contained many elements of lively speculative interest, and its solution, touched up with broad dramatic license, was not lacking in what we love to call "good theater." There were no dull moments during the evening, and very few quiet ones.

THE PLAYERS toiled in high pitched tempo [illegible] the police shouted [illegible] the women shrieked [illegible] lights now and then went [illegible] there was no shirking among the actors, for there was no time for it. Guy Hitner and [illegible] O'Sullivan as two [illegible] investigators, kept the [illegible] at brisk [illegible]. Of the gentler folk Leslie Bingham, Dorothy Gale and Myrta Bellair filled difficult roles. They formed a well disciplined, high tension group and gave [illegible]

IT MAY BE seriously asked if the drama of [illegible] is not now well on its way to happy [illegible] "Spook House" [illegible] audience was [illegible] Here [illegible] was something with a [illegible] in it.

ANN CORIO AT GAYETY

'Ann Corio and Her Own Show' opened yesterday for a week's stay at the Gayety. It proved to be a great collection of stars. Between Ann herself and the 12 other lights assembled with her, the entire production zoomed along.

Miss Corio was given a rousing reception.

Charles (Tramp) McNally and Joe Yule dispensed a line of comedy which was quaint and funny. Others were Ruth [illegible], Althea Barnes, [illegible], Jule Paulson, Dot Ahern, [illegible] Harris and the Empire Comedy Four.

Even the chorus deserves a word. It was selected and trained by Miss Corio and some of the specialties were entirely [illegible] received. [illegible] ety jazz orchestra kept things speeded up.

LUPE SHINES AT STATE

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Lupe Velez really does shine in "Hell Harbor," feature film at Loew's State this week. She has her best role, and she rises nobly to the demand. The rest of the cast are also up to the mark, and some leap past par. As a sample of camera work, of what we may term atmospheric painting, the photoplay is magnificent. But as drama it is doubtful that its greatest appeal lies in the play of that essential of the motion picture, lights and shadows.

Judged as a scenic offering purely, "Hell Harbor" is a [illegible] among pictures with a tropic background. Judged as melodrama, it at times becomes plain "piffle," despite its excellent acting and well nigh perfect photography. The entire blame may be squarely placed upon the shoulders of the director, Henry King, doer of splendid things in the days of the silent plays, but here guilty of utter over [illegible] upon what should have been mere incidentals to the unfolding of a stirring tale of human greed. Where Mr. King shines, he should have put restraint upon his own artistic yearnings. Where he is in eclipse, he should have let his light burst through brilliantly. His very genius for pictorial splendor spells his own doom, and "Hell Harbor" becomes just a passing show, with much that is good to see, but very little in it that is dramatic.

The film is an adaptation of a [illegible] "Out of the Night" by Rida Johnson Young. Lupe Velez is supposed to be descendant of the piratical Morgan. Jean Hersholt, local business king, dickers with her father for her as his bride. Her [illegible] is to add to his fortune by [illegible] pearls he has just bought from a [illegible]. The gems are to be offered to John Holland, master of a trading ship. For him Miss Velez has conceived a hatred on the ground that his purchase of the pearls spells ill for her. But love comes at first sight and instead of the death she had prepared for him, she gives him her heart.

The girl of her own accord [illegible] the pearls and takes them to [illegible]. He spurns them and [illegible] and when she returns from his ship she finds Hersholt has been slain by her father. The latter overpowers the daughter and carries her off. Rescue comes after Holland, with a Harold Lloyd ability to welcome and [illegible] danger in a truly [illegible] the father, the police and [illegible] everybody else.

Miss Velez is convincing as [illegible] as ever, [illegible] Gowland fine as the father. Other members of the cast are satisfactory, Paul E. Burns as Blinkey even better than that.

GORILLA MAN HAS DOUBLE IN JUNGLE

"Ingagi," now being shown at the Majestic, has a certain intriguing quality, due to the deft hand which has pieced together the program in general, and the feature film in particular. In proof thereof, witness the beginning, and the end. At the start, a truly thrilling animal picture, serving to whet the appetite for what "Ingagi" was to serve up later. Then the finish in what one might call a primitive cave man drama, excellently staged and almost perfectly acted out. Into this climax sequence were interwoven such extra sauces as nude women, with "shots" of ape-like figures in the trees to give seeming truth to the dubious African "legend" that mating of woman and gorilla was an actuality. This road to Rome evidently leads to the box-office; the more strikingly true when it is remembered that "Ingagi" has already made a fortune for its producers.

First on the Majestic program is that sterling action film, "The Killing and the Killer." As a German silent feature, the battle between the mongoose and the cobra was as exciting as any ringside contest; now it is here with sound, the voice of the curator of the New York Zoo, Dr. Ditmars, explaining as the picture proceeds. By the oh's and ah's from the audience, one could sense the intense interest. After this opening number came another excellent special, "Yesterday and Today," contrasting the primitive movies with those of today. This was applauded at frequent intervals, and at the close came vociferous handclapping indicating that the feature was a popular one.

"Ingagi" engages the eye first with tourist photography, liner at sea, then Mombasa, then the safari. Many varieties of wild animal life are limned in the lights and shadows, all familiar African denizens save alone the armadillo. There are portions, too, that have their thrills.

But the most sensational, as is quite natural is saved for the last. This section deals with the giant apes. This is where the picture seems to "go Hollywood" and to look synthetic as real movies of human love and hate, and what not. One's motto as he looks on may well be, "Believe it or not!" Anyway, the picture reveals some startling things; most folks would say they were incredible. Yet some may believe all this happened as shown.

"Ingagi" is said to have been filmed on an expedition headed by Sir Hubert Winstead, F. A. S., of London.

For ourselves, we will say in the words of a Scotch friend, "I hae me doots"; that is just a personal expression, solely. We will add that we did enjoy immensely "The Killing and Killer," and also "Yesterday and Today." As for "Ingagi"—the word is translated for us as meaning "gorilla"—let him look to his own defense. And even if he did pocket $50 a day for his services, he deserved it.

HOWARD BILLS TWO STARS

There are two big stars at the Old Howard this week. Mae Brown is in her element with her singing and dancing. Another favorite is Harry Evanson, who gained fame this season as the leading comedian with Lew Talbot's "Wine, Woman and Song" Company.

This week the show bears the name Royal Flush Burlesque, with Fred Binder, Mike Sacks and Harry (Hello Jake) Fields appearing at their best. Opal Oakley, Tangara, Adeline Parks, Vera Walton, Pearl Adams and 24 dancing maids are added features.

In addition to the burlesque the management provided vaudeville and pictures. Rector and Doreen, daring equilibrists; the Balabano Five Royal, accordion artists, and the Four Life Buoys were entertaining.

GODIVA ROLE FOR DOROTHY KNAPP

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, May 20—These professional beauties certainly do pick out good jobs for themselves. Dorothy Knapp, who figured much in the newspapers as an Earl Carroll beauty and a little later in a lawsuit, is now in Hollywood. She will play the Godiva role in "Whoopee."

Louella O. Parsons

You will remember Lady Godiva who rode through the streets on a milky white horse. She wore nary a stitch of clothing and her loyal townspeople refused to embarrass her by looking. Samuel Goldwyn will not take that much liberty in the movie. The Lady Godiva in the play was almost completely covered with long golden tresses.

Miss Knapp before she was recognized as New York's prettiest show girl almost signed up for a picture with Richard Barthelmess. Dick at the time, laughing said she was so pretty that probably no one would be looking at any other characters in the picture. I am under the impression if the Lady Godiva scene proves at all satisfactory Miss Knapp will remain out here and continue her screen career.

JAMES TULLY, red hair, stubby beard and stalwart frame and all, is considering strongly playing a part in Jack Gilbert's picture, "Make Way for a Sailor." Tully wrote the story with Laurence Stallings and there is a part in it just built for him. Who better than the author could describe himself? Jack who has been getting in readiness for this next talkie, will have Leila Hyams and Wallace Beery in the cast. Here's hoping it will be a knockout.

ONE OF THOSE steady actors who just go right along regardless of what happens is George O'Brien. He seems to work about as steadily as any actor I know. As soon as he finishes "The Last of the Duanes," a Zane Grey epic, he will start on "Fair Warning," adapted from Max Brand's novel, "Untamed." Mitchell Harris and Ruth Warren are also in the cast. Alfred Werker will direct.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Betty Compson and Bebe Daniels talking about old times at the party given by Mrs. W. K. Howard and Marie Mosquini in honor of Miss Daniels. Carey Wilson reversing the usual order of things by presenting Ben Lyon with something for his trousseau. Mrs. May Sunday, Hope Loring, Anne Glazer, Mrs. Arthur Hornblow and other well known women [illegible] at the Assistance League [illegible] for charity. Marion Davies posing in costumes of the 'Floradora' era for one of the movie magazines. Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Cantor and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Chevalier making a foursome at the Ambassador Hotel. That's all today. See you tomorrow.

THREE ACTS AT SCOLLAY STOP SHOW

The vaudeville bill at the Scollay sq. yesterday proved one of the best yet presented at this playhouse. Offerings followed one another in fast order and upon three occasions the show was stopped by the applause, namely "Uncle Dave" Macon, Claude and Marion, and the Clayton Wentworth Co. "Uncle Dave," the mountaineer song man, proved popular with his repertoire of songs. With his banjo and guitar this oldtimer received an ovation.

Claude and Marion in their skit, "Still Arguing," repeated past performances in Boston and curtain call after curtain call was given this team. Clayton Wentworth and his company, Corrine Marsh, Garnet O'Brien and Billy Packard, were seen in his skit, "Heydey of Youth" and were one of the bright lights of the bill with their eccentric dancing and song numbers.

Still another big favorite was Joe Freed and his presentation of "What Might Happen." The Gould Girls are playing a repeat engagement, sponsored by their previous success some three weeks ago, and gave a new repertoire of songs and dances. Murray and Irwin were likewise good and the Six Orellys, an acrobatic team, rounded out a well balanced vaudeville offering.

The screen production was "Ladies Love Brutes," with George Bancroft in the leading role.

NORUMBEGA OPENS MAY 24

Norumbega Park will inaugurate its season on Saturday, May 24. Among the innovations is Norumbega's new Totem Pole ballroom.

Another item is the New Wonderland golf course. There are also the addition of a 'Phantom Crystal' to its squintorium, and construction of a miniature railroad. The management announces the park will have the biggest lot of attractions in its history.

Beautiful

CORINNE GRIFFITH

'REDEMPTION' IS ORPHEUM FEATURE

"Redemption," all-talking film adaptation from Tolstoi's famous drama, "The Living Corpse," serves as the latest starring picture for John Gilbert, and is on view at Loew's Orpheum. Renee Adoree, Eleanor Boardman and Conrad Nagel are the chief supporting players.

The narrative has a Russian background, and deals with the pull of heredity upon the human soul. Gilbert is seen as a young officer, torn between love for his wife and the strange call of gypsy blood inherited from his ancestors.

Ann Codee, popular French comedienne, headlines the attractive stage show, with a very amusing offering of special songs and comedy gems. "Whitey," canine star, under the able guidance of his master, Ed Ford, gives a remarkable exhibition of tricks. Ted Lorraine and Jack Minto, assisted by Mlle. Margaret Davies, presents a novelty entitled "Bits of Hits."

Vernon Rathburn and company of clever saxophonists, featuring Miss Florina, and Monroe and Adams, jugglers, are the remaining acts.

An added attraction this week is the presentation of "Hot Dog," conceded to be one of the funniest two-reel comedies ever made. An all-dog cast furnishes a barrel of laughs. Hearst Metrotone news and other short reels complete the bill.

Leo P. Flynn, Colorful, and Knew Boxing Game

Jack Conway

"Leo P. Flynn, who is dead from pneumonia," said Mr. Boston, "was one of the most colorful figures in the boxing game.

"The 'Silver Fox' started his career in Providence, R. I. Fifteen years ago Leo knocked out a livelihood showing K. O. Sweeney, Johnny (Kid) Alberts and other sturdy battlers at the small cities and towns of New England at prices ranging from $100 to $400 a bout, Leo's cut of the purse seldom ran more than $100.

"Leo's training in the small towns gave him a thorough knowledge of the boxing game and the men who furnished the action. He was well fitted to step into the old Madison Square Garden as matchmaker under Tex Rickard in 1920.

"In those days, a matchmaker could manage boxers and have them appear at his own club. Leo had a stable of some 44 good, bad and indifferent boxers and he kept them busy at the Garden and at clubs throughout the country.

"Jealousy towards Flynn caused other managers to get the New York boxing commission to pass a ruling which barred a matchmaker from having his own boxers appear at the club where he was engaged.

"Flynn could have turned his stable of mitt flingers over to his brother, Hubert, capable handler of boxers, and lived up to the letter of the law. Instead he resigned his Garden post to give all of his attention to Dave Shade, Kid Norfolk and the numerous other boxers under his management.

"Flynn's wealth has been reported as high as $250,000. He never went for the stock market unless he had some exceptionally good information, as he considered the market a suckers game.

"The last time I met Leo was in New York in January. I was standing outside of the New York Garden when a big, foreign make of a car, with a colored chauffeur, breezed up to the curb.

"Leo stepped out of the car and came over and shook my hand. I remarked about the class in which he was traveling.

"'I get a kick out of a big car and a chauffeur,' he told me. 'I have two cars and I like to see them spin. I have all the money I shall ever need for Mrs. Flynn and myself. You know I have been in the money for several years, and I haven't permitted any glib stock salesmen or other sure thing birds to talk me out of my dough.'

"Flynn was very much in the news when he directed the last comeback of Jack Dempsey. He was in charge of the old Tiger in his bout with Jack Sharkey and in Dempsey's Chicago match with Tunney. I heard it said that Flynn got between $35,000 and $75,000 for his services with Dempsey.

Flynn One of Few of Great Seconds

"I always considered Flynn a great second as well as a fine manager. He seldom got excited during the course of a bout and accepted a poor decision against one of his boxers as part of the game.

"The night of the first Shevlin-Shade bout at the Arena, Flynn was in Shade's corner. It was a close fight and Shevlin got the decision.

"Shade rooters, aroused by the official finding, rushed to Flynn and demanded what he thought of the verdict.

"'It wasn't very good,' said Leo easily, 'but the boys will live to fight again. And what a swell house they will draw.'

"Shevlin and Shade were signed by Tom Goodwin for a return match in Mechanics Building and the event was a sellout. The 'Silver Fox' was right.

"Flynn liked Shade better than he did any other boxer he ever managed. He had Dave purchase the next house to him on the Grand Concourse in New York and the pair spent much time in each others company.

Leo Could Shoot Golf in the 70's

"With financial independence, Flynn spent much of his time at golf clubs and permitted his assistants to watch his boxers train in the gymns. Leo carried the same calmness he displayed as a second to the links. And he became a 70 golfer. He could handicap most of the sport stars and win their money without half trying.

"Flynn had many friends in Boston and New England. They will miss his amusing stories concerning boxing and his intense loyalty. Leo was a student of the old school of boxing and a nod of his head was as binding as a signed contract.

"We shall miss the old 'Silver Fox.'"

Much of the success that Rindge has enjoyed on the diamond this year is due to the stellar playing of the above trio. Normile plays at second and also takes his turn in the box. Sarausky, right fielder, is a good hitter, while Galligan is the mainstay of the hurling staff.

Tolan's World Dash Mark of 9½ Seconds Accepted

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—The International Amateur Athletic Federation today recognized as a world's record the mark of 9 5-10 seconds for the 100-yard dash made by Eddie Tolan of the University of Michigan last year.

The federation's decision against the Simpson and Rockaway records went unprotested.

Ed Hamm of Georgia Tech, whose running broad jump mark of 25 feet 11¼ inches made in 1928, was momentarily recognized, was nosed out by a more recent performance of S. Cator of Haiti.

Among the records of other nations which were recognized was a 10-mile running mark made by Paavo Nurmi, "the flying Finn."

Bolivia and the Philippines were admitted to the federation.

Four Other U. S. Records Accepted

Recognition also was given to the records made by Eric Krenz of Stanford University in the discus throw; Lee Barnes, formerly of the University of Southern California pole vault; Emerson Spencer, former Stanford captain, 400-meter run; and the United States national team of Baird, Barbuti, Spencer and Taylor for the one-mile relay.

Marks made with starting blocks, namely George Simpson's 9 2-5 hundred yard dash and Dick Rockaway's low hurdles record, were turned down.

Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, was chosen vice-president at the meeting attended by delegates from 23 nations, among whom were Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U.; Murray Hulbert, former president; Gustavus T. Kirby of New York, and Joseph MacCabe of Boston.

The federation passed an American resolution that, concerning the payment of appearance money to amateur athletes, no further legislation is required but that the nations be requested to apply the rules stringently.

On the question of paying airplane fares of athletes the meeting decided that competitors must themselves pay the difference between airplane and railway fare.

Specifically, the records accepted as new world standards together with the old marks which they displace are as follows:

100-yard dash—New record 9.5 seconds, made by Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan, in Big Ten championships, Evanston, Ill., May 25, 1929. Old record, 9.6 seconds held by Charley Paddock, Chester Bowman, D. J. Kelly and H. P. Drew, all of the United States; and Cyril Coaffee, Canada.

Discus Throw (best hand)—New record 163 feet, 8¾ inches, made by Eric Krenz, Stanford University at Palo Alto, Calif., March 9, 1929. Old record, 158 feet, 1¾ inches, made by Bud Houser, April 3, 1926.

400-Meter Run—New record, 47 seconds, made by Emerson Spencer, formerly of Stanford, at Stanford University, May 12, 1928. Old record, 47.4 seconds, made by J. E. (Ted) Meredith, Oct. 27, 1916.

Pole Vault—New record, 14 feet, 1½ inches, made by Lee Barnes, Southern California at Los Angeles, April 28, 1928. Old record, 14 feet, by Sabin Carr, Yale, May 27, 1927.

One-mile relay—New Record, 3 minutes, 13 2-5 seconds, made by George Baird, Morgan Taylor, Ray Barbuti and Emerson Spencer of the United States Olympic team, in U. S.-Britain meet at Stamford Bridge, London, Aug. 11, 1928. Old record, 3 minutes, 61 4 seconds made by C. D. Rodgers, Earl Eby,

GREEN LEADS IN TENNIS JOUST

Despite the fact that Ted McDonald of Dartmouth, winner of the singles last year, was not defending his championship, the Green today was in the lead in the New England Intercollegiate tennis tournament at Longwood Cricket Club.

Henry J. Johnson, Jr., runner-up last year, and John Richardson, both of Dartmouth, had advanced to the quarter-finals. In the doubles Buck Owen and Tom Howard of Wesleyan, last year's runners-up, had advanced to the second round by defeating Scott and Rutan of Bowdoin, 8-6, 5-7, 6-4, while Johnson and Richardson were also in the second round.

Boston Skipper May Pilot Cup Defender

New York, May 20 (AP)—Speculation as to who will be at the helm of the defender of the America's cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V in September has brought the names of four skippers to the forefront.

Final choice of a skipper is in the hands of the American selection committee, but indications now are that he will be chosen from among former Commodore George Nichols, son-in-law of J. P. Morgan; John S. Lawrence of Boston, Harold S. Vanderbilt and either Paul Hammond or Langdon K. Thorne.

Among them they will pilot all four of the new sloops built to withstand Sir Thomas' latest challenge for the cup the United States never has lost.

Commodore Nichols will be at the helm of the Weetamoe, Lawrence will handle the Yankee, either Hammond or Thorne will pilot the Whirlwind and Vanderbilt already has had the Enterprise, fourth prospective defender, out against the Yankee and [illegible] in test races.

While the United States chance of retaining the cup [illegible] largely on the skill and judgment of the skipper, the deckhands themselves will carry a heavy load of responsibility.

It is still recalled that the speed and efficient workmanship of the American crew played a large part in the successful defense of the cup in 1920. This year, however, the Shamrock V may have whatever advantage there is in this respect.

RECORD-BREAKING STRIDE

This Associated Press photo shows Frank Wykoff, of the University of Southern California, in full racing stride. Wykoff recently ran 100 yards in 9 2-5 seconds, without staring blocks. That means the record probably will be accepted as the official new century mark. Wykoff has touched the old record time, 9 3-5 seconds, in the past. Note the power and speed portrayed in every line of the sprinter's body.

HARVARD-YALE MEET SATURDAY

That Harvard w[illegible] meet with Yale on Saturday and finish well up in the I. C. 4-A meet at Cambridge May 30 is the opinion of Coach Eddie Farrell of Harvard.

"The Yale meet depends on whether Sid Kelselhorst, the Yale captain, is in running shape," Farrell said. "If Kelselhorst is out of the meet Harvard will win hands down. If not it will be a fairly close meet."

"Although Vernon Munroe pulled a tendon in the Dartmouth meet last Saturday, I feel sure he will be in good shape for the Yale meet. Munroe and Charlie Engle have a battle all their own to settle in the quarter mile."

Munroe's time for the [illegible] has been consistently under [illegible] ever since he ran his great race in the Penn relays. The Harvard flyer is capable of better [illegible] stiff competition. Charlie Engle, the Yale flyer, has [illegible] in the same distance [illegible] this season.

Oscar Sutermeister is picked to win the pole vault against Yale. This event up to now has been annually conceded to the Elis, but since Sutermeister vaulted 13 feet [illegible] inches at Hanover, it is generally thought that he will repeat in the two coming track fiestas.

Harvard Will Make Strong Bid for Title

On May 30, Harvard will make its strongest bid in years to capture the I. C. 4-A title. One title at least is expected to stay in Cambridge after the meet, for Pen Hallowell has a fine chance to win the mile.

DIGLANE BIDS FOR MAT TITLE

The eyes of New England will be focussed on the Garden Thursday night, where Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg, heavyweight champion of the wrestlers, will defend his title and $10,000 diamond-studded belt against Henri Diglane, French flash.

The two heavyweights will meet in a finish match, best two falls out of three, before one of the largest crowds that has ever attended a wrestling bout in New England. Their match of a few months ago was one of the most dramatic of the year and their return bout is a "natural."

It was announced that the show will be started promptly at 8 o'clock, and that Sonnenberg and Diglane will enter the ring as near 9.30 as possible. When Sonnenberg last wrestled at the Garden out-of-town customers had difficulty with the train service, and Promoter Paul Bowser intends to send the champion and his challenger into the ring at 9.30.

Promoter Bowser is confident that the crowd and receipts will be larger than they were for the Sonnenberg-Zarynoff bout of a month ago, when a crowd of 16,000 paid $42,000 to watch the bout.

Diglane in Fine Condition for Bout

Diglane, already in the finest condition of [illegible] is scheduled to train today and tomorrow at Toland's gymnasium to wind up his training. The Frenchman, who thoroughly outwrestled Gus the Goat in their previous bout before being [illegible] is confident that [illegible] outwrestle Sonnenberg and [illegible] his title away.

Promoter Bowser has surrounded the main bout by a sparkling preliminary [illegible] which will be featured [illegible] Lewis and [illegible]

Fuller to Bid for N. E. Lightweight Title

Another week of training is expected to put Sammy Fuller, popular North End Italian, in the best condition of his career for his bid for the New England lightweight crown when he clashes with Andy Callahan of Lawrence at Mechanics building next Monday night.

Under the direction of Doc Bagley, who started Gene Tunney on the road to the world's championship, Fuller is working out daily at Sharon Gardens and his camp attaches already have hopes that he will take the measure of the Merrimack Valley [illegible]weight.

It will be Fuller's initial bid for lightweight recognition and as it will be the first time he has been able to go into the ring with all his strength at his command, his friends are looking for him to register a victory.

Jimmy Rogers, who has registered six straight victories here, will meet Vittoria Livan, Italian champion, in the eight-round semi-final, while the show will also mark the professional debut of Charlie Kelley, Newton, and Ring Larsen, Quincy, 1930 national amateur champions.

Waltham Out-Slugs Concord, 17 to 13

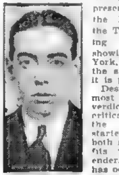
RED SOX END STAY IN HUB TODAY

By JOE CASHMAN

Tomorrow, the Red Sox start their longest road trip of the season in Washington, while the Braves return to the Wigwam with the Brooklyn Dodgers to open a home stay of four weeks.

The Wagners have furnished Hub fans with more first-class baseball than they have enjoyed for years during their present stand at the Fens, and the Tribe, judging from its showing in New York, will do the same while it is present.



Joe Cashman

Despite the almost unanimous verdict of the critics before the campaign started, that both native outfits were tailenders, neither has occupied the basement as yet and the customers are beginning to feel that neither will at any time this season.

It is too early to make such a prediction, but if the Sox and Braves can avoid the dungeon for the next month, during which they will play a series with every rival, their chances of finishing out of the cellar will be exceedingly bright.

This is especially true of the Sox. They must start off by playing six games in four days with the league leading Senators. After that, they will go to Philly for four games in four days with the world's champion Athletics and then journey to New York for four games in three days with the Yanks.

A day off, and they will open a four-game series in Cleveland, to be followed by another four-game engagement in Detroit, three games in St. Louis and four games in Chicago.

ue of Circuit
rd Test for Sox

e Wagners couldn't possibly be led a tougher month's assign t, and if they can keep from ping to the bottom until these games are finished, it is a safe that they will do so for the nainder of the race.

Their chances would seem to de nd on the rookie twirlers, such s Durham, Smith, Shields, Mulooney and Bushey. If these twirlers can come through with a few victories, the Wagners ought to hold their own in foreign parts. If not, they are sure to have their troubles.

The Braves face just as tough a schedule, being listed to play 30 games at the Tepee, but they will have the advantage of performing at home.

Brooklyn comes tomorrow for four games. The Dodgers are now leading the National League and being determined to stay on top, are sure to offer the Warriors plenty of competition.

The lowly Phils will be the attraction for the next four days. They are at the bottom but with their punch, have no license to be and promise to start a wrecking crusade shortly.

SHARKEY DESCRIBES THE DEMPSEY BATTLE

By JACK SHARKEY
American Heavyweight Champion

My knockout of Jim Maloney caused Jack Dempsey, who had been training for three months in the mountains of California, to announce he was going to stage a comeback.

Tex Rickard saw the possibilities of a bout between the former champion and myself, and announced he would stage the contest on July 21, 1927, in New York.

Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager opposed the match.

"I will guarantee that Sharkey will be Tunney's opponent in the September bout if you turn down the Dempsey match," Gibson told Johnny Buckley. "Sharkey is red hot as a drawing card. He wouldn't be a better attraction even if he knocked over Dempsey with a punch.

"I am afraid that a Sharkey-Dempsey contest will leave Tunney without an opponent. The bout may be a bad one or the winner may meet with an injury which will keep him out of action for a long time."

Buckley talked the matter over with me. I told him I perferred tackling Dempsey in July, that I was confident of winning and that I didn't care to wait until September before going into action. I have always felt that long lay-offs were injurious to me.

I also got a thrill out of the thought of battling Dempsey. The latter had been my boyhood boxing hero. He was champion in the days when as a U. S. sailor I sailed the seas and dreamed wildly that some day I might become a champion.

ADMIRED DEMPSEY

And when I started my career as a professional boxer I took the name Jack after Dempsey. He was my ring idol—a two-fisted fighting man if ever the ring had such.

I had seen Dempsey the night he lost his title to Tunney in Philadelphia. At that time I felt I could have beaten both Tunney and Dempsey. I later learned that the Dempsey of Philadelphia was in poor condition and that he never should have entered the ring.

So the night of July 21, 1927 found me in the same ring with Dempsey. A crowd of 85,000 persons jammed the ball park and the gate receipts hit $1,083,000.

Think of it! I was only three years out of the preliminary ranks and I was battling in a million dollar show. My end of the purse ran to $211,000.

My plan of battle called for me to leave my corner fighting, to try to nail Dempsey with a right hand punch to the jaw as soon as possible.

Tunney scored with such a punch in the Philadelphia fight and I felt it had a lot to do with keeping Dempsey up in the air for the remainder of the contest.

At the gong I forgot all about the great crowd and the fact I was battling my old ring idol. My one thought was to bang Dempsey on the chin with a right hand sock.

DEMPSEY GROGGY

I swept out from my corner to meet the charging Dempsey. It was easier to hit Jack than I thought it would be. As he plunged forward, his guard was low and I drove a fierce right hand blow to his chin.

The Dempsey advance halted for a fraction of a second, then came sweeping on again. This time I opened fire with both hands. My blows landed on the old Tiger's jaw. He sagged a bit and tried to reach my body with left and right hand shots, but I moved away.

As Dempsey came at me again, I scored with another right hand smash. It was a terrific blow and Dempsey's knees buckled, but he didn't go down. At the bell, Jack was groggy.

Billy Gibson, occupying a ringside seat, told Gene Normile, Dempsey's former business manager, at the end of the first round that it was a 20 to 1 shot I would win.

In the second round, I continued my terrific bombardment of Dempsey. The former champion was groggy, but kept coming forward in the face of terrific punishment. He was in poor condition when the bell sounded.

SHARKEY K. O.'D

Dempsey's seconds worked over him frantically between rounds. Billy Duffy later told me that if it hadn't been for a special preparation of ammonia and some other stimulants he had in his corner that Dempsey would never have answered the bell for the third round.

I tried to finish Dempsey in the third frame, but once more he managed to weather the storm of blows.

From that point until the contest ended in the seventh frame there were some hectic exchanges of blows. Dempsey directed most of his attack to my body.

I made the mistake of turning to speak to the referee in the seventh round and Dempsey nailed me with a left hook to the chin. That spelled K. O.

After the bout sport writers and ringside spectators claimed I was fouled repeatedly by Dempsey from the third round on.

Personally I have never set up a claim of foul. I have not added my voice to the world-wide "Fair-or-Foul" controversy. I have always believed in the ring commandment "Thou Shalt Not Squawk."

All I asked was another shot at Dempsey. I knew I could knock him out.

A year ago last winter when in Florida, Dempsey told Johnny Buckley he would never fight me again. He said I hit too hard and was too fast.

That was a great tribute coming from one of the greatest champions of all times.

Diamond Pick-Ups

"You can't keep a player who hits .340 in 154 games out of the lineup," was the way the Fenway "prexy" put it.

He was correct. Neun had the call at the start but when the Tribe fell into a slump, Sisler was put in and he immediately guided his mates to the victory column with his big bat.

Brown is again a very famous pitching name in baseball. About 20 years ago, Mordecai "Three-Fingered" Brown of the Cubs and Charlie Brown of the Boston Nationals, were rated among the best flingers in the game.

Now, Lloyd Brown, Senators' southpaw, and Clint Brown, rookie right hander of the Indians are listed among modern mound stars while Bob Brown of the Braves promises to be with a little more experience.

Hub fans will be looking upon two of the Red Sox for the last time this season this afternoon. There are now 27 players on the club and by June 15, three days before the club will be back in the Fenway again, the roster must be reduced to 25.

One catcher and one outfielder is likely to go. Either Asby or Connolly will be the receiver and either Webb or Cicero will be the outfielder, in all probability.

Babe Ruth is the only member of the great Red Sox team which brought the world's championship to Boston in 1915 and 1916 who is still playing in the big leagues.

Last year, both big league races were as good as over by July 4. According to present indications the outcome of each will be in doubt this year till along about Labor Day, if not later.

President Phil Ball announced when he fired Dan Howley as manager of the Browns and appointed Bill Killifer to pilot the club, that he had finally acquired a boss who would always work for the best interests of both the management and the players.

Maybe Killifer is doing that and probably Howley didn't, but Weymouth Dan had the club in the first division for two years, while now it is in the cellar.

ACCEPT TOLAN'S 100-YD. MARK

Nurmi's new 10-mile running record displaces a 26-year-old mark held by Alfred E. Shrubb of Great Britain.

By a vote of 18 to 4, the International Federation rejected a Finnish-Dutch proposal to allow "broken time," the payment of amateur athletes for time lost from work while competing in the Olympic games, and decided to leave the amateur status as it is at present. Both the United States and Great Britain were firmly opposed to "broken time."

George Simpson, Sprinter, Renounces Starting Blocks

Columbus, O., May 20 (AP) George Simpson, Ohio State's record-breaking sprinter, today renounced the use of starting blocks in future races upon learning that the International Amateur Athletic Federation had finally disapproved his record of 9.4 seconds for the 100-yard dash because of his use of the mechanical device.

Sanitary Probe on Docks Ordered

Mayor Asks Health Officials to Investigate When Told of Complaints

Mayor Curley today asked the health department to investigate reports of unsanitary conditions on Boston docks.

This action was a result of an interview with the editor of the Gazette, who informed the mayor of complaints of harbor workers. This situation is also being investigated by the port authority, which is urging a clean-up campaign not only for the sake of the longshoremen but also because of the thousands of tercentenary visitors expected at the docks.

In the presence of the editor, Mayor Curley dictated a letter to the health department, declaring that reports of unsanitary conditions had been called to his attention and asking for a prompt checkup.

Today's Who's Who

The subject of today's sketch on harbor personages is Percy Edward Eden, chief clerk and ship broker of the Dollar Steamship Co.

Percy E. Eden

He has a wide circle of friends, as nothing ever seems to annoy him, except possibly some comment about his famous iron hat, which he wears in all kinds of weather.

His hobby is quoting statistics on sports. He can recall how many runs any ball player made in any given year, or how many times any leading heavyweight has been knocked out. Percy was once a star basketball player in Newton.

Eddie Connell ascribes his bowling ability to expert instruction from Eden.

On the Ambulance

Mayor Curley informed the Gazette editor that he is looking into the matter of an ambulance for Charlestown. A report will be available soon. Dock workers and others employed on the waterfront, as well as the employers, are hoping the city will see its way clear to provide proper protection in this district.

Bostonians Afloat

A group of New Hampshire and Massachusetts clubwomen will sail under the direction of George F. Marsters, Inc., on the Europa for an extended tour of the British Isles, France, Switzerland, Germany and Holland. They will attend the Passion Play at Oberammergau.

The Massachusetts group is headed by Mrs. F. A. Fales, Norwood, wife of former Senator F. A. Fales. In this group are Mrs. Emily Lewis, Miss Annie Davis, Miss Sadie Richardson, all of Norwood, Mrs. William M. Jamieson and Mrs. Blanche [illegible] Eldridge, both of Boston; Miss Julia N. Lowden, Mrs. Mae F. Cormerais, Mrs. Grace E. Brown and William N. Lowden of Dedham, Mrs. Elizabeth Barker and Mrs. Mary L. Hadley of Cambridge.

Returning yesterday to New York on the North German Lloyd Liner Bremen were these Bostonians:

Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore Hodges of 475 Heath st., Brookline, accompanied by Wetmore Hodges Jr., Master [illegible] M. Hodges and Master Henry C. Hodges, Sumner Putnam and Topman Gregory, returning from an extensive motor tour; also Jacob F. Brown and J. F. Burgess of 273 Summer st.; Mr. and Mrs. James J. Phelan, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. P. F. Clark and Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Middendorf, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Pearne of Melrose, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Peabody Gardner Jr.

On the North German Lloyd Liner Berlin arriving in New York were:

Prof. and Mrs. Sidney B. Fay of Cambridge. Prof. Fay, professor of European history at Harvard, was honored in Berlin at a reception given by scientists and public officials.

Among the New Englanders sailing on the Bremen tonight from New York is Mrs. Chandler Hovey of 258 Hammond st., Newton, wife of one of the members of the syndicate sponsoring America's cup defender "Yankee," which was recently launched at Lawley's yard in Neponset. Mrs. Hovey's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hovey, who last year sailed the Oriole in the International Regatta at Marblehead against the crack German and Swedish teams, will this summer represent the United States at Kiel where the 30-meter matches will be sailed.

Boom in Bamboo

The Japanese vessel Paketoyo Maru arrived in port yesterday afternoon with 200 bales of bamboo fishing poles for Bostonians. She also carried 500 tons of hemp and goat skins. She will load some 750 tons of old car rails for the Orient. The Mayebashi Maru, also of the Patterson, Wylde & Co. agency, will arrive here late next week with 500 tons of Boston cargo and will in turn return with more car rails.

Longshoreman's Gazette

CARL MORRISON, Editor

Vol. 2 No. 17

We learned of a trip to New York by seven officials of the Longshoremen's union which reveals a side to these workers not generally known.

Last December local longshoremen signed an agreement authorizing unlimited sling load as a means of unloading ships quicker. This brought Boston on a par with all other North Atlantic harbors in the matter of quick turnover of cargoes and therefore in reduction of expenses to shippers.

The Boston delegation called on nearly a dozen leading steamship people in New York and informed them of the new arrangement. These officials were greatly interested, and one of the biggest shippers pledged more business for the port on the strength of this call.

Another Challenge

Today's Safety Rule

Rule No. 18 of the marine safety code is:

"Bridles for removing strongbacks from hatch coamings shall be of sufficient length so that strongbacks can be readily hooked on. Wire bridles shall have serving of wire, marline, rubber hose or other suitable protection over hook-end splice."

In [illegible] we have the pleasure of reporting that [illegible] were only three lost [illegible] accident last week. One man has septic poisoning caused by a splinter. Another sprained his wrist when he slipped under a load of bananas and the third caught an ankle between two bales.

Diary of Modern Mariner

Today our modern [illegible] reports:

"Saw the longshore show of 1930 pass in review. Heading the cast was Leo Shanahan, doing an act as Romeo, but unwillingly. Saw Jim Dalton in an awful hurry to get to work. He is the fastest walker in his section, but in his spare time is a tank driver in the National Guard. Heard Tom Riley has a new job. Saw Fred Baker drive up in a car which is famous in the harbor. Larry Ryan, getting thinner each day, brought up the review."

A Suggestion

"There is a good opportunity to compete with Baltimore on pulp shipments by rebuilding part of Mystic wharf for a pulp wharf with storage facilities. This would be directly on the water's edge and might well mean the arrival of large quantities of pulp for Boston."

NEW INTERESTS

Lately we have heard complaint about David J. Kelleher, energetic vice president of H. P. Lambert Co. "Dave" has never been [illegible] for [illegible] feminine view [illegible] recently he has been [illegible] his friends. He has two new [illegible]. When "Dave" [illegible] at a night school studying law, he may be found bossing some hard working pill rollers in the medical outfit of the 101st Infantry of the National Guard.

Favors Stronger Piers

The policy of the Port Authority in having Capt. Lord [illegible] harbor matters with [illegible] of incoming vessels [illegible] interesting fact. [illegible] Capt. Irving of the Cunarder Scythia expressed the opinion that cement piling should be added to several of our piers which are known to be weaker than many in New York. The Hub piers are constantly in danger of being smashed up unless masters exercise the greatest care in [illegible] in their ships. The Cunard [illegible] said he enjoys Boston and hopes it will have business enough to warrant making it the major port on his trip.

WANT HOOVER TO GET TARIFF BILL SOON

Congressional Deadlock Due to Be Broken After Long Session

By FRASER EDWARDS
Universal Service

Washington, May 20. President Hoover will have the $1,000,000,000 Smoot-Hawley-Grundy tariff bill in his hands for signature or veto by June 1, it was indicated today as the Senate is paving the way to break the conference deadlock with the House.

What amounted to the surrender of the Senate on the export debenture provision and the repeal of the President's rate making powers under the flexible feature has been wrung from the old coalition by [illegible] margins when four Democrats switched from their former positions.

After five hours of bitter debate on the two major points of controversy between the two houses, the Senate yesterday voted 43 to 41 to release the Senate conferees from their pledge to hold out for the debenture plan.

A few minutes later, the Senate also released the conferees on the flexible provision when Vice President Curtis cast the deciding vote to break a 42 to 42 tie. It was the first opportunity Curtis has had to vote on an important legislative measure.

25,000 Killed at Housework Yearly

Washington, May 20 (INS)—Accidents incident to housekeeping are responsible for about 25,000 deaths every year or about one-quarter of the fatalities from accidental causes, the United States Bureau of Standards said today.

The government, in co-operation with the General Federation of Women's Clubs has inaugurated a [illegible] campaign to make the home safer and to remove as many as possible of the hazards of housekeeping.

Daily Health Hint for Readers

Care should be exercised not to change children's winter undergarments to summer ones before the weather is definitely settled. Have them wear thinner garments first. This has been an exceptionally cold spring and much illness is reported in New England.

Gen. Calles, in resigning, May 20, 1929, as Mexican secretary of war and commander of the army, said the revolution was over, and he announced his retirement from office, politics and public life. It is said that [illegible] persons were killed in the Escobar revolt on [illegible] sides.

DECLARES AMERICAN WIVES ARE PAMPERED

Also Extravagant, Opinion of Visiting Englishman

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Beatrice Fairfax

Again a [illegible] has been telling us charming fairy tales about [illegible] and we gather round [illegible] with all the naive [illegible] to the splendid [illegible] of Cinderella or the [illegible] of Little Red Riding Hood—it's so different from everyday [illegible].

The latest spinner of these [illegible] is an Englishman, Mr. William Gerhardi, who has been lecturing to richly dressed, highly-groomed club women—at so much per head—all over the U. S. A.

He's afraid, what with being unduly cherished at home by our husbands and too expensively turned out by our dressmakers and jewelers, we're a burden to the family budget and a peril to the country as well. The gentleman from England is quite upset about it, no doubt, unless he hasn't been enjoying his afternoon tea nearly as well as before he found it out.

The U. S. Department of Labor has quite another story to tell about the extravagance of American wives. Now if Mr. Gerhardi had only gone to the Women's Bureau and asked for Bulletin 75, compiled by Mrs. Agnes L. Peterson, his fairy tale would have [illegible] a good deal of [illegible].

Mrs. Peterson in her excellent pamphlet, "What the Wage-Earning Woman Contributes to the Family Support," [illegible] that [illegible] offers [illegible] to women and gives astounding figures to prove how many married women help to keep the pot boiling.

Furthermore, it is highly probable that the visiting Englishman was completely misled by the decidedly smart appearance of his various audiences who sat listening—maybe with tongue in cheek—to his flattering estimate of them.

It doesn't require much imagination to picture the scene in city flats or suburban bungalows as the lady of the house made ready to hurry off and hear what Mr. Gerhardi believes about her.

The dinner tucked into the fireless cooker, the table set, the trusty neighbor next door asked to look after Margaret and Jack when they came from school, the same as she did for Trusty's children when her bridge club met last week.

A quick polish to the fingernails, a little dingy from peeling the potatoes, and the pearl rope, not too big or spectacular—from the 5 and 10, and she's all set to hear the foreign gentleman talk on the extravagance of American wives.

Suppose an American in England bought an excursion ticket to [illegible] the English "dukeries" as they call the splendid ducal estates which are thrown open to the public at certain seasons. Would the American be as guileless as to think all English country houses had picture galleries, lakes with swans, smoothly shaven lawns and picturesque lodge keepers bobbing curtseys. Then suppose he had the [illegible] of going about England lecturing on the prevalence and peril of such luxuries, how many Englishwomen do you think would pay to hear him?

The answer is perhaps Englishwomen don't like fairy tales, as much as Americans; again, it's [illegible] flattering to hear ourselves [illegible] as princesses when we know we're Cinderellas.

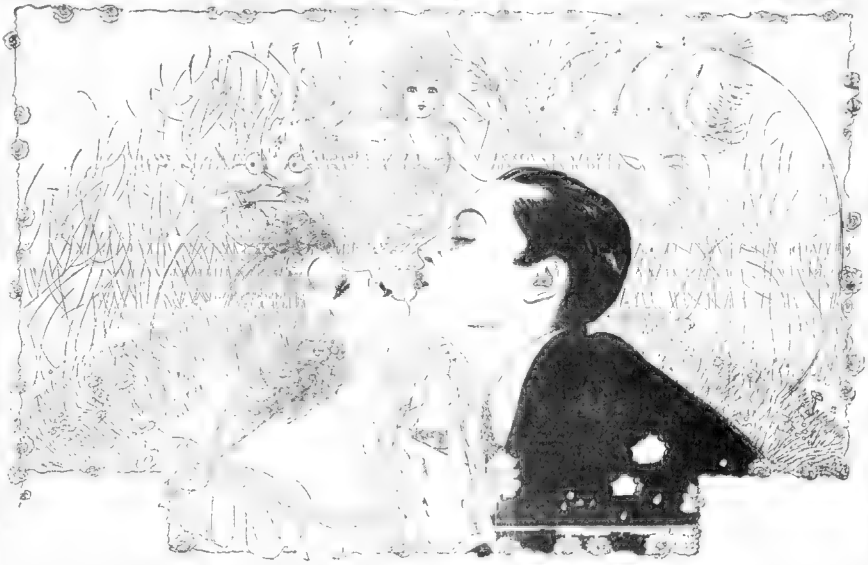
“Tulips”—Surprised by Spring

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley



Spring is the time for Young Things. Then's when Time works an "aweful" magic and turns himself into a beautiful, rosy, golden-haired young lady. Young things. Young buds. New flowers. Freshened up thoughts that pass—really and truly—for new when you yourself are no longer young.

Young ideas. Young clothes meaning brand-new ones, fresh from the pen and pencil [illegible]. Young animals, oh, so dorable, furry, innocent, without care, wild with play and new life. Young moon.

And with young moon, YOUNG LOVE!

Two-lips in the spring. Do you remember when you were there? If you do and spring is getting under your winter skin, you will kiss your wife with some of the lost sweetness, forgotten ardor, laid aside delight. And if you do you will be surprised to find the spring time of [illegible] answer. NELL BRINKLEY

CHAPTER 33

[illegible] appropriation for the launching of a new razor featured early between Eaton and Parrons when it came to selecting an advertising [illegible].

McPherson, with his uncanny [illegible] got wind of this and [illegible] to question Anne as to certain policies of the agency whose [illegible] who had quitted [illegible].

Anne answered him with a blunt [illegible] she knew anything at all. And McPherson asked her if she was still employed by Mr. Eaton. The answer to that was [illegible].

She went home, worn out with [illegible] whether she had been [illegible]. Strictly speaking, [illegible] she had been [illegible] she [illegible] with absolute knowledge to McPherson.

[illegible] Anne [illegible] Her heart was not [illegible] Mr. McPherson [illegible] back where she had [illegible] in Lawrence Eaton's office. And [illegible] that she had returned to the Eaton Agency [illegible] ever be [illegible].

[illegible] was [illegible] with delight when he learned that she had [illegible] the position. [illegible] afford to give herself away. She merely stated that she did not [illegible] and was [illegible] tired of it. His natural reply was to urge marriage upon her.

"I'll get a vacation during July," he said. "What's the matter with making it a honeymoon?"

Anne put his eager hands from her and turned her cheek to his kiss. "No. I said in the fall. Give me this summer," she begged.

"But what will you do?" he wanted to know. "You might as well marry me. You wouldn't [illegible] summer job. What's the matter, Anne? Can't you make up your mind?"

"I [illegible]" she answered. "Oh, please, [illegible] try to be patient! I want to go home and be with mother for a few [illegible]. Kathleen's going on the road. I'll give up the flat. I'd like to rest," Anne said.

"You don't care for me at all," he said, wounded.

"Yes, I do. Only—only—" To her surprise and horror, she began to cry.

"It's all right," he said, over and over. "You're tired and nervous. I'm a brute to nag you so. Forget it and make your own plans. I won't say another word."

So the flat was closed and Kathleen went off on the road, her heart [illegible] with a sense of adventure, yet a little low because of some one she was leaving behind. Frank Young, an impetuous and clever newspaperman whom she had met through her brother, had become an [illegible] factor in her life. She admitted as much to Anne.

"That's one reason why I'm taking this road-company job," she said frankly. "It will keep me away all summer, and by then I ought to be sure. I am sure when I'm with him, but I've been that before," said wise Kathleen, "and it's being away that counts. If I don't miss him as much as I'm afraid I'm going to—why, that's proof enough."

"Has he asked you to marry him?"

"Yes. Of course he has. The first time I met him, for that matter!"

"If you marry him, will you stay on the stage?" Anne asked, feeling that this young sister of hers had matured amazingly in the last year.

"Of course. Frank doesn't mind. He likes it," Kathleen told her. "I'd like to have a baby," she announced further, "but there's plenty of time for that. We've talked it over."

"You've talked it over, and still haven't said you'd marry him?" Anne asked.

"Not yet. Not until I get back from the road. Not until I'm sure," Kathleen answered. But her eyes were sure as she spoke.

"Of course I am. What makes you think such a thing?"

"You're not," her mother insisted—"not the way a girl should be who's looking forward to her wedding."

"Girls don't sit on silk cushions and hem napkins and dream and flutter and swoon the way they used to," Anne told her. "I'm perfectly happy, and Ted and I understand each other."

"I doubt that," Mrs. Murdock denied instantly. "There isn't a man and woman living who understand each other. If they did," she added with unconscious cynicism, "they'd never fall in love, much less marry. Of course, it's natural for a girl to have—misgivings. All of them do. I did. But I married your father and I've never really regretted it, although I used to think I did when you were all small and there wasn't much money, and it was summertime and hot in the kitchen, and I had an ailing baby or two to look after and fret over. But that wasn't regret really. It was lack of faith in my own strength. You'll know, some day, when you've children of your own."

Children?

Ted "liked kids." He said so; he acted as if he did. Anne had seen him with Jim's uproarious pair.

Children—her's and Ted's!

She tried to face that veiled [illegible] Kathleen's open discussion of it had brought the matter close. And here her mother was talking, hinting . . .

Shantung Suit, Smart for Torrid Days

By ANN ARDEN

Ann Arden broadcasts latest style news over WHDH every Tuesday and Thursday at 11 a. m.

STREET AND sportwear styles have been [illegible] for a long time so it isn't surprising to find that shantung, so widely used for spring and summer sportswear, steps from the boardwalk to the sidewalk. Dyed in dark shades it promises to be popular made up in tailored jacket suits. It is also to enter the [illegible] of jackets that complete the sleeveless frock. Shantung for the street is distinguished from shantung as it appears in the sports field, by careful tailoring.

ACCESSORIES ARE like anagrams—with a bit of cunning you can make so many combinations! But unlike anagrams, which takes a group of words to win the game, accessories require only those combinations which spell "chic" in order to achieve the ultimate triumph.

IN THE PAST few [illegible] a number of accessory combinations. This summer we are destined to wear an entirely new combination—light accessories with a darker tone costume. This new trend has been confirmed at several of the more fashionable gatherings. Navy blue accented with pure white is excellent fashion.

LINEN, LONG a favorite in summer frocks and suits, now makes its debut as an accessory fabric. Little turbans and matching scarfs of linen have been endorsed by the famous Agnes. Linen covers light heads worn with spring frocks. Linen handbags in print or plain accompany linen scarfs. Linen pumps are a new note for spring. Linen-like straws make up many of the spring and summer hats. And linen is [illegible] trimming on hats [illegible] harmonizing with [illegible] and summer frocks.

SINCE WHITE gloves have invaded every fashion field, including that of sports, it is necessary to find white materials that will stand fairly strenuous wear. White goatskin is the newest discovery for sport wear. The skin has a [illegible] surface that is washable and it wears very well.

Correct Manners .:. .:. by Mrs. Beeckman

Convenience of the Salad Knife

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. Is it proper to use the knife and fork in eating salads and hors d'oeuvres? I have always been cautioned to use the fork and avoid the knife whenever possible. Now, from an authentic source, I learn that through a recent change, the fork and knife are both to be used.

2. When making introductions, what is the correct form of making a lady and gentleman acquainted? Should the man's name or the lady's name be mentioned first?

S. F.

1. Yes, indeed, it is correct to use the knife, as well as the fork, when we eat salads or hors d'oeuvres. In fact there is a distinct tendency [illegible] custom has always been abroad to use a knife as well as a fork for [illegible]. For canapes served at tables, for instance, for hors d'oeuvres, for the fish course, for the entree course, for the main course, for the salad course and for the fruit course. For the dessert course there is also a tendency [illegible] place both a dessert spoon and a dessert fork.

So if you have in your mind to "avoid the knife as much as possible" I advise that you erase this edict from your mind and reconstruct your idea of the [illegible].

2. [illegible] to the lady and usually her name is mentioned first.

Or more informally and casually you may mention only the names [illegible].

STOCK MARKET PRICES HAVE LATE RALLY

New York, May 20—Prices of active issues generally moved downward in the last hour today on the New York Stock Exchange, after sinking and rallying by turns throughout the rest of the session.

Johns-Manville and Westinghouse Electric were each off 5 or more in late dealings. Losses of 3 or more showed for American & Foreign Power, Consolidated Gas, du Pont and United Aircraft.

Losses of 2 or more points appeared for Union Carbide, Missouri Kansas & Texas, General Electric, American Telephone and Allis-Chalmers.

SPOTTY RALLYING

Point or more recessions at the same time were registered for Columbia Gas, International Telephone, National Dairy, Radio Corp, Radio-Keith, United Corp, Stone & Webster, Southern California Edison and U. S. Steel.

J. I. Case moved over a wide range. It sold early in the day at 32, dropped 17 points and then recovered practically all its setback.

Spotty rallying was staged by a number of issues near the finish.

The market was jarred out of its recent stagnation, and trading was again in substantial volume, the ticker falling a few minutes in arrears at times. The market remained almost entirely a professional trading affair, however, although there were indications that a moderate amount of nervously held investment stock was being shaken loose.

While little hope of anything more than an up-and-down market was held out in brokerage circles, there was a feeling in some quarters that with the increase in volume, the market should soon reach a point of vantage from which a good temporary rally might be expected.

Several prominent traders who took profits on the long side last week were said to be committing themselves heavily on the short side, which was regarded as indicating a real covering movement before the end of the week.

NEWS IS MIXED

News was mixed and perhaps slightly in favor of the bear side, although indications that the impasse in Congress over the tariff bill had been broken was regarded as of decidedly bullish significance.

Steel production was estimated at only 75 per cent of capacity for the industry at large this week, against 78 last week, although U. S. Steel was still reported as holding at 80.

The Department of Labor reported a slight decline in industrial employment in April, amounting to only 1-5 of 1 per cent, and pointed out that April is normally a month of little change. A marked increase was shown, however, in employment in the building trades.

Reports regarding the California petroleum situation, brought to the fore with crude price cuts at Santa Fe Springs last week, were more reassuring. Stocks of crude in the Pacific Coast territory decreased 777,619 barrels in April, against 28,[illegible] in March.

P. N. Doggs, chairman of the California operators committee in charge of conservation, said production would be materially reduced this week and that the curtailment program is in a more secure position than ever, despite the obduracy of two or three operators.

FORD ORDERS STOCK 'EXTRA'

[illegible] Ford Motor Co. of [illegible] declared a cash [illegible] of $1.20 and an extra of [illegible] June 23 to stock of record June 2 on all outstanding [illegible]. Directors signified intention of [illegible] stock on regular $1 [illegible] basis payable semiannually in June and December.

[illegible] semi-annual dividend distribution will be made in December [illegible] payment of 60 cents, which of course will be in addition to the dividends just declared.

Ford of Canada reports for 1929 net profit of $5,232,819 after depreciation, taxes, etc., against net loss of $3,400,651 in 1928.

This is equal to $3.15 a share on the combined 1,588,956 no-par shares of class A and 70,000 no-par shares of class B stocks, against net loss of $3,400,651 in 1928.

Surplus at the end of 1929 was [illegible] at the end of 1928. Total sales and other income during 1929 amounted to $59,840,535, against $47,038,[illegible]32 in 1928. Last year's production, including sales of affiliated companies, was 8[illegible] cars and trucks, an increase of 12,550 over the preceding year.

INSECT ARMY FIGHTS PEST

Brazilian scientists will use thousands of battling insects in a new experiment to eliminate the crop-destroying coffee pest, according to a report from Vice-Consul Arthur G. Parsloe at Santos, made public by the Department of Commerce.

These insects are known as "propropis Naussuta" and are reported to be deadly enemies of the coffee pest (stephanodores). They were recently brought back from Uganda by a technical expert of the Brazilian Biological Institute. The number of insects brought back was about 2,000, which have since increased to about 13,000 by cultivation. The first experiment will be made in the Campinas district shortly, according to the Brazilian information.

During 1927, the existence of stephanodores was observed in the coffee plantations of 13 districts, while in the following year, 1928, the pest was observed in 18 districts. During 1929, the pest infested 29 areas, and from a total of 10,436 plantations, a total of 3,844 are now infected.

SELLING WAVE FOLLOWS NOTE OF OPTIMISM

By FRANK H. MELOON

The stock market stepped for a while out of the doldrums yesterday with a selling wave, resumed today, that followed closely on issuance of a note of optimism by Secretary of Commerce Lamont. Mr. Lamont set the time for business to resume normalcy as "within three months." The previous noteworthy selling, which was of very much greater volume, came right after President Hoover had given out an optimistic statement.

A few months ago either one of the statements mentioned, coming from any high authority, would have resulted in brisk buying. The stock market, lacking general public participation, is in the hands of professionals, according to the prevailing view in State Street. There is an old saying that the stock market always performs the unexpected and that is just what often happens.

Chief George J. Eder of the Latin-American Section of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will be the principal speaker at the Copley-Plaza session of the Traffic Club of New England tonight. The members will see President Hoover's personal films depicting his "good-will visit" to our Southern neighbors. Nathan W. Hawkes, vice-president in charge of traffic of the Boston & Maine Railroad, is president of the Traffic Club. P. L. Stuart is secretary-treasurer.

Increases in brokers' loans appear unlikely to prove important market factors for some time to come. Yetman's Statistical Service notes that the further decrease of $67,000,000 in brokers' loans for week ending May 14 makes the total decrease from the April peak $257,0[illegible],000. With the loan total now standing at $4,007,000,000, the average increase for the 19 weeks so far this year has been $35,000,000. This would be at the annual rate of $1,820,000,000 dollars, or approximately the same amount as the loans declined in the two weeks ending October 3 and November 6, 1929, respectively.

"Loans could increase at this rate for approximately 80 weeks from the present time before reaching the high point of October 2, 1929. This would mean that at this year's rate of increase so far loans would reach their previous peak just about two years later, or around November, 1931. The ratio of brokers' loans to total value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange is still hovering within less than one point of the lowest ever reached," says Yetman's service.

A humorous weekly sketches possible future diversions for the Wall and State St. millionaires. The sober fact is that most of these millionaires go in very little for the things many people think they would like to do if they "had a million."

Several of the big Boston operators in Wall Street known personally to the writer attend church services daily—the sort of thing that isn't ordinarily "carried in the news." One of the most successful State st. stock brokers almost invariably spends a couple of hours daily after the closing of the market in "window shopping" in downtown Boston.

A number of the wealthy State Streeters patronize the Boston Elevated instead of rolling to their homes in expensive, chauffeur-driven automobiles. It is no uncommon sight in State st. to see a rich broker driving a light automobile of inexpensive make, not especially new.

R. W. McNeel, director of McNeel's Financial Service and president of the McNeel Institute of Investment Education, Inc., will leave on Saturday for a nine weeks' business tour of continental Europe. He will be accompanied by Mrs. McNeel. They will sail from New York on the Lloyd-Sabaudo liner Conte Grande.

Mr. McNeel plans to make an exhaustive study of business and financial conditions on the continent, especially regarding the new $300,000,000 German reparations loan soon to be announced and its influence on American and world financial conditions. Since $80,000,000 to $100,000,000 of the loan is to be offered in the U. S., Mr. McNeel believes that first-hand information in regard to European conditions is essential.

* * *

Mr. McNeel's itinerary will include the greater part of the continent. He will visit Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Holland, Belgium and France.

NEWS OF BOSTON MARKETS

PRICES LOWER IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Prices were worked to lower levels on the Boston Stock Exchange today. A selling wave shortly after mid-day sent prices of the leading issues 1 to 4 points lower.

Boston & Albany dropped almost 4 points. Credit Alliance dipped to a new low for the year at 10, down 1⅛. American Telephone sagged 3 points.

Alles & Fisher added 1½ to reach a new high for the year. American Woolen preferred gained over 2 points, Pacific Mills 1, New England Telephone 1 and General Alloys almost a point.

Point or more losses were shown by the following issues: Edison, General Capital, General Electric, Penn R. R., Public Utility Holding, Railway Light & Security, Stone & Webster, United Fruit and Utilities Equities preferred. Cities Service was fractionally lower at 35⅛.

Gamewell Co. and subsidiaries report for April net income after all charges of $78,348, the best April in the history of the company.

Net income for the 11 months to April 30, 1930, the first 11 months of the company's fiscal year, amounted to $922,784, equivalent to $7.76 a share on the 118,928 common shares outstanding.

During the month of April, new orders received were in excess of completed work, resulting in an increase in unfilled orders as of April 30 in comparison with March 31.

Ceco Manufacturing Co., Inc., reports for year ended March 31 net loss of $97,535 after charges and after deducting extraordinary expenses of $360,608, against net profit of $389,050 in the previous fiscal year.

Credit Alliance class "A" and common shareholders are being offered five-fifteenths of a share of Commercial Credit common stock and up to an additional four-fifteenths of a share when and as the assets of Credit Alliance are realized. Statement on bulletin 54 to the effect that Credit Alliance shareholders would receive one-third of a share of Commercial Credit is in error.

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

FOR SIX PER CENT

M. M., Brighton—I have $5000 in a savings bank, which I want to invest. How about National Biscuit? I notice the stock has declined somewhat during the past week.

Ans.—Although National Biscuit has declined from higher levels, the yield from the $2.80 annual dividend is 3¼ per cent. When dividends will warrant, the current price has not been indicated. You could get $180 annually, or 6 per cent, from ten shares each Republic Steel $6 preferred and 15 Kansas City Southern preferred, costing less than $3000. This plan leaves $2000 for the savings bank.

WHAT IS AMOUNT

C. R., Boston—I want to buy 100 shares Commonwealth & Southern. Do you approve?

Ans.—Commonwealth & Southern is speculative, though the stock pays 60 cents a share annually. For 12 months ended March 31, 1930, earnings on 31,007,622 shares were 72 cents a share. The company, incorporated May, 1929, has an extensive interest in several well-established public utilities. How much cash have you? Is this your first investment? You may need bonds.

FOUR BONDS

S. D., Quincy—I am a salaried man, with dependents. I have $6000 in a savings bank and want to invest $4000 in listed bonds which you may suggest.

Ans.—Buy $1000 each Pennsylvania Railroad general 4½s, 1965; Philadelphia Company secured 5s, 1967; Southern Colorado Power first "A" 6s, 1947, and Trumbull Steel first sinking fund 6s, 1940. These bonds, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, yield from 4½ to 5.8 per cent.

Sidelights of Market

Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line, which is said to harbor a considerable short interest, provides bad anchorage for the bears with its repeated new highs for the move. Its leadership among the natural gas isues is maintained partly because of its near-monopoly of current pipe line plant production.

* * *

The Boston bears tell the bulls that some of those economic services putting out the most optimistic utterances today are led by men who suffered most severely because they could not foresee the stock market crash that came last year.

Stanley W. Prenosil says:

"We see little profit in trying to guess bottom prices in a decline of this kind, and would therefore prefer to stay on the sidelines until prices are again stabilized. From the long-pull standpoint, we see no reason to change our bullish attitude on the stocks of companies that are making favorable earnings comparisons with a year ago.

* * *

"We are not particularly surprised at the weakness of steel shares as second, and possibly third, quarter earnings are bound to be disappointing, due to recent downward price readjustments and the decline in operations. Coppers still have to face a series of dividend cuts. Motors probably will do better in the second quarter than they did in the first, but not all companies will make favorable comparisons with the second quarter last year. With Easter sales included in April figures, second quarter chain and department store earnings should be favorable. The better grade of food stocks offer attractive opportunities for speculation or investment."

James P. Maher, formerly financial editor of the New York American, has become associated with Shields & Co., members of New York and Chicago Stock Exchanges. Previous to his connection with the American, Mr. Maher was on the staff of the Wall Street Journal.

Shawmut Corp. and First National-Old Colony Corp. have reduced rates ⅛ per cent on 30, 60 and 90-day acceptances to 2½ to 2⅝ per cent; rates are unchanged for four and six months at 2⅝ to 2½ per cent for former and 2¾ to 2⅝ per cent for six months.

Attempt to sell in New York $1,000,000 of "memberships" in Universal Oil & Gas Co. of Oklahoma City was stopped as result of joint action by federal and state authorities. Claimed that brokers had been granted 40 per cent commission and $15,000 of stock additional for every $100,000 of memberships sold. It was planned to sell securities to those who had purchased memberships.

For first time in the industry, almost all oil companies east of the rockies are buying only what crude oil they can dispose of in the near future. Formerly both producers and pipe line companies purchased about 50 per cent of the crude oil offered them. Amount not sold was stored in tanks. No new storage tanks are being built.

Shell Oil interests are reported to be negotiating for $15,000,000 Paragon Refining Co. of Michigan which, in addition to substantial refining operations, owns approximately 500 retail outlets, 700 tank cars and considerable network of pipe lines.

House with prominent Philadelphia connections report that interests in that city are optimistic regarding the long range prospects of Electric Storage Battery. It is reported that the company has been doing a large business with the Ford Motor Co. and with several public utilities. In addition, contracts are said to have been received by the company from the United States government which will mean satisfactory earnings in the coming months.

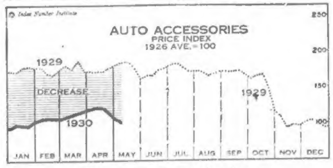
Although there has been some profit-taking in General Railway Signal since its advance last week, the important traders who took a long position in the stock have maintained their holdings. Realizing of profits came from others who were attracted into the issue on its sharp advance. The company is in an exceptionally strong position in its field, and started the current year with a large carry-over of unfilled orders. This permitted active operations and good earnings for the first quarter. Since then considerable additional business has been taken and there are good contracts still in sight for the company's safety appliances.

Accessories Sales Up



Prices of Auto-Accessories Stocks

By HARLOW PETERS

(Irving Fisher Service)

Among the most mysterious actors on the stock market are the auto accessories issues. What they will do and what the accessories industry will do seem to be somewhere in the so-called lap of the gods.

The industry itself is difficult to determine. Business for April took an upturn, but still remained far below 1929 pace. Profits for the first quarter of this year generally showed reductions ranging from 27 per cent to 68 per cent from those of a similar period last year. Although a great many leading producers have developed sales channels outside the automotive field, the industry still depends chiefly on motor orders for new parts and replacements. The increasing tendency to diversify the outlet, however, holds good possibilities for the industry later on.

Stock prices of the industry made a good recovery from the November crash, but fell heavily during the April liquidation, the index (1926 equals 100) descending to the position held at the end of January.

PROSPERITY IS SEEN AS NEAR BY FORBES

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

New York, May 20—Skies are gray, rain is pelting against the window, damp air chills the bones; but, instead of becoming gloomy, let us turn, rather to some of America's many distinctly cheery facts and features.

Americans are now working rather than speculating.

Economy has given place to wasteful extravagance.

Savings are increasing.

More people than ever before are investing in life insurance.

The cost of living has come down, thus fitting the United States to compete more advantageously in world markets.

Our business standards have been raised nearer than ever toward the high level of the Golden Rule.

Relations between employers and employed have become widely co-operative, enhancing this nation's power to conquer international markets.

The science of management has advanced more here than in any other land.

So has inventive genius.

Our work folks are the most ambitious in the world.

They, therefore, are eager to produce in order to enjoy more of the conveniences, comforts and luxuries of life than are enjoyed by the working class anywhere else on earth.

We have learned better than any other people how to hook up electric power to man power and productivity per worker.

Nowhere else are the working classes paying less heed to the preachings of Communists.

Nowhere else are so many families being added year by year to the roll of investors.

Nowhere else are so many workmen engaged in the inspiring process of becoming home-owners.

We now are enjoying that most potent of all tonics for the development of enterprise, employment and prosperity: cheap money.

The purging process which had become necessary in the stock market has been quite thoroughly carried out.

Both bonds and high-grade stocks can now be purchased to yield more than the rates current in our financial metropolis.

Borrowing for commercial purposes is very light.

The present plethora of low-priced money is bound to induce entrepreneurs to put it to work in one direction or another.

Eextensive security offerings here by foreigners will have a stimulating effect upon our foreign trade.

Stocks of finished goods throughout this country are relatively light, and as ordering has been rigidly hand-to-mouth, the time is approaching—it probably is at hand—when sufficient replenishing will have to be done to quicken our business pace.

It is hardly conceivable that our main farm crops which have been selling at depressed prices will continue to decline; much more likely is it that recovery is imminent.

The evil of overproduction is being taken in hand by leaders in various industries, and cut-throat competition, entailing sales at less than cost, is becoming less flagrant throughout our economic system.

The alarm precipitated by the stock market panic of last fall has subsided, and faith in steady, if slow, national progress toward prosperity is being re-established.

The spending of more money than ever before in advertising by American enterprises reflects the characteristically courageous spirit of our ablest men of affairs.

Tariff uncertainties—a veritable bugaboo—will shortly be out of the way. It is not possible, however, to become elated over the handiwork of our tariff tinkerers.

While mergers, machinery, increased managerial skill and other factors making for economic production tend to create dislocation of employment and unemployment, the ultimate effect will be the infinite strengthening of this nation's power to lead, not to say dominate, other countries industrially, commercially, financially.

Whereas tax burdens are becoming still heavier in most parts of the world, America's public debt is being drastically reduced under the financial statesmanship of Secretary Mellon.

Finally, Americans are so constituted that they cannot long remain in the doldrums but can be depended upon to unleash their boundless native initiative, energy, optimism and the irrepressible daring bred of their pioneer blood.

RADIO WIZARD DOES MARVELS OF POWER

The radio wave that Maurice J. Francill, world-famed engineer and inventor, will use to perform a series of experiments in wireless remote control in Greater Boston next week, is too small for science to measure, but is estimated to contain an actual amount of energy ten million times less than the preassure of a fly's foot, when it walks.

Nevertheless, with this infinitesimal mite of power, Fancill plans, while in Greater Boston, to milk a real live cow, operate a miniature battleship, run three standard, stock model automobiles and a trolley car and perform other unique demonstrations, all without the touch of human hand upon the mechanical plants, or devices under control.

Also, with this tiny grain of energy, Francill may bake bread, freeze ice cream and control a regulation locomotive and passenger train.

HERE FOR WEEK

Francill will be in Greater Boston for seven consecutive days, starting Monday. He is being brought to this city by The Boston Evening American and Publix theaters, as an entertainment, educational and scientific feature, to give exhibitions of skill that has won him renown. During his seven-day stay here, he will be the vaudeville headliner at the Scollay Square theater.

In addition to his appearances in Boston, proper, Francill will give demonstrations in several nearby cities and suburban communities. These include Lawrence, Lowell, Lynn, Salem, Quincy and Haverhill. These outside exhibitions will consist of operation of the radio controlled automobiles.

Francill will open his Boston engagement Monday at 12:15 p. m with a big, free exhibition of the radio control of three standard stock model cars in a roped off area in the heart of the downtown district. The site of this demonstration is to be selected Tuesday by Francill's manager and announced Wednesday, after a conference with city officials.

RADIO CHAUFFEUR

In this demonstration, Francill, by wireless waves, will perform virtually every operation of the cars that chauffeurs could accomplish, yet there will be no one in the machine, nor will the cars be touched by human hand.

He will operate two of the autos at the same time, producing on these two cans either the identical, or different, operation, singly, or in unison, or in any combination of numbers he may elect, or that spectators may request.

Twice each day during his stay in Greater Boston, the wizard will speak over Station WHDH, under auspices of the Boston Evening American. In his lectures the wizard will touch upon wonders of radio already accomplished and will dwell upon developments he forecasts for the fast-dawning radio age.

PICKS CARS AT RANDOM

The automobiles that Francill will use will be Hudson and Essex cars, supplied through courtesy of the Henley-Kimball Co., 652 Beacon st., distributors. These cars will be selected at random by Francill from the showrooms of the Henley-Kimball Company and will be exactly like any other Hudsons and Essex machines on the streets of Boston, or the highways of Massachusetts.

Francill selected Hudson and Essex cars because of ease and flexibility of engine movement and other mechanical refinements. What he accomplishes with the automobiles he uses he can duplicate with any other cars of that make, because he says all Hudsons and Essex machines are uniform of performance.

"Radio Wizard"

Maurice J. Francill, whose marvels with radio have gained him international fame, will demonstrate his magic in Boston next week under the auspices of the Boston Evening American and the Publix Theaters.

At the Radio Dial

THAT TENOR voice which you have been hearing on Columbia programs singing operatic bits during the past week or two belongs to Theodore Karle, latest acquisition of C. B. S. Tonight he will ring the rafters with "Questa e Quella," "La Donna e Mobile" and other familiar and popular bits from "Rigoletto" during the Grand Opera hour on WNAC and Columbia stations at 10:30. Adele Vasa, soprano, and Barbara Maurel, contralto, will be associated with him in the production of a condensed version of the opera.

Theodore Karle

TWO WOMEN of some prominence in the concert and opera world will be heard in programs which come over WBZA and the N. B. C. Blue network tonight. The first is Sophie Braslau, erstwhile contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who comes as guest soloist in the Libby broadcast at 8:30.

AN HOUR LATER, Martha Attwood, former Boston girl and soprano of the forces of the Metropolitan, will be a guest singer in the Sunoco Show on the same group of stations. This young woman's voice seems to register with loud speakers far better than most of the highly vaunted sopranos of the air. On the same program will be Walter Mills, baritone, the Ramblers Trio, piano duo, vocal ensemble and an orchestra of 35 pieces.

RADIO-KEITH-ORPHEUM brings the popular Johnnie Marvin to the microphone during the regular weekly broadcast over WEEI and the N. B. C. Red Network at 10:30. Others contributing to the program are Mr. and Mrs. Allan Wood in a comedy sketch; Margaret Schilling, soprano; and Peter Higgins, tenor.

TONIGHT'S Eveready Hour will be devoted to a sketch written around incidents in the career of Anton Dvorak, with special reference to his "New World Symphony." It is not generally known that Dvorak, like Debussy, came to America and made a close study of Negro and Indian melody. His symphony is full of themes from Negro spirituals and Indian chants. Here is an interesting study for those persons afflicted with notions regarding heredity and the effects of environment. Dvorak's father wanted him to follow his own career in the paternal butcher shop. Instead, the determined Czeck had turned out to be one of the most e ordinary composers of modern times, with a delicacy of imagination and a daring originality hard to equal.

BOB RIPLEY'S archeological researches unearthed last night for radio listeners a few facts regarding the classic tune, "Yes, We Have No Bananas." This composition, in case you do not remember, was a reigning popular American folk song some years ago. In fact, it not only reigned—it deluged the country. Well, tireless Mr. Ripley made the discovery which a few musicians who happened to hear the song in its prime made on the spot; namely, that it is made up of four older tunes; one a classic, the other three ballads. The opening bars of the "Bananas" refrain is picked up bodily from the rousing "Halleluja" chorus of Handel's "Messiah." From there it branches off to "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "An Old Fashioned Garden" and "Seeing Nellie Home."

OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH gave a brief little talk just before closing his piano recital in the General Motors broadcast last night. He said he believed the time not far off when the piano would take its rightful place in radio. There is no instrument which can so completely express all moods and the resources of every kind of musical composition. Furthermore, there is a piano in nearly every home, and it should be made possible for students to hear all the great masters, he said.

The player's program brought up visions of the late Isadora Duncan. Several of his selections are indelibly fixed in the minds of Isadora's admirers as a result of her frequent interpretation of their mood. One wondered last night whether memories of an old artistic friendship hovered over the piano as the musician played Schubert's "Moment Musicale," the gavotte from Gluck's "Paris and Helen" and the Brahms rhapsody

Cotton Production of 1929 Recorded

Washington, May 20 (AP)—Cotton production in 1929 was placed at 14,823,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight by the Department of Agriculture today in its revised estimates of the crop. That compares with an estimate of 14,919,000 bales made in December last year and the census bureau's final ginning figures of 14,821,499 bales of 500 pounds gross weight, made March 20 this year. The 1928 crop was 14,477,874 bales.

The BIG House

By JACK LAIT

. . . human life and limbs are as precious on New Year's eve as at any other time . . . there has been an epidemic of criminal driving by intoxicated persons in this community . . . it can be halted only by severe penalties . . . yours is an especially atrocious example, you, an intelligent, well-bred, successful young man, a college graduate and gifted with so many of this world's blessings . . . in accord with the verdict of the jury, a just and sound finding, I therefore sentence you to seven years' imprisonment in the State penitentiary."

BIG House

Doors Swing Wide

"Here y're, Kid . . . at the Big House!"

The deputy's tone was as impersonal and business-like as that of a subway guard at the end of the line. But to Dean Kent the words sounded as though shouted by a shrouded, funeral figure at the Gates of Despair.

They had tumbled on his eardrums and ratcheted into his brain and knocked from the pedestal of reason that last vestige of desperate hope which had lingered even after the judge had jiggled the dice-box of justice and thrown for him a "natural"; even after the deputies had come and taken him away on the train; even after they had pushed him into the drab, forbidding "Black Maria" which met him at the station.

He had felt through all that, it could not be. Something must happen. He would never go to prison. Not Dean Kent. It was all an accident from the start—the crash, the arrest, the swift trial, the sentence, the train ride, the—No, it could not be! Yet—here before him were the huge, massive walls of the State prison. Silhouetted against the evening sky was the solitary figure of a tower guard beside a machine gun. The great steel gates of the prison ground and grunted open. The van entered. Dean Kent felt a sharp tug at the steel bracelet on his wrist. The deputy to whom he was manacled was crawling out. The prison gates beyond were closing and Dean Kent, wistfully and forlornly turned his pale, pathetic face back for one last look over his shoulder, at the outside world, the world on top of which he had sat.

The other led the way through a door graced with the legend, "John Wallace, Captain of Yard." They entered a small office, where a heavy-set, heavy-jowled, heavy-eyebrowed man sat a table. The first deputy spread a document before him.

"The commitment papers, sir," he said. For a brief instant the small, beady eyes of Capt. Wallace searched the drawn face of the prisoner. Then the gaze shifted to the papers. "Huh! Manslaughter . . . seven years," a deep, hollow voice intoned. This was followed by a rapid fire of questions—"First time in prison?" . . . "Yes" . . . SIR, TO ME!" . . . "Yes, sir" . . . "How old?" . . . "Twenty-four—sir" . . . "Ever in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps?" . . . "No, sir" . . . "Use tobacco?" . . . "Yes, sir" . . . "Dope?" . . . "No, sir" . . .

His questioner brought the inquisition to an abrupt end.

"Frisk him!"

The metal bracelet was taken from Kent's wrist, and as he rubbed the red indentation in his flesh the deputies ransacked his pockets, tossing their contents on the table. Capt. Wallace listlessly pawed over the miscellaneous collection—a watch and chain, notebook, letters, handkerchief, a West African "lucky" pocket-piece—those personal effects which become such an intricate factor in the daily life of every man. He made a heap of everything save a package of cigarettes. This he shoved toward the prisoner.

"You can keep these," he said, magnanimously. Kent reached out and then hesitated.

"Id—I'd like——"

"That locket," said Kent.

"Oh-ho, I see. Let's look in it."

Kent made as if to restrain him, but the captain darted an authoritative flash at him. He pried open the locket and a small, oval picture fell out.

"Humph! Not a bad looking jane," he commented. Then he asked: "Married?" Kent shook his head. The sight of his picture caused his Adam's apple to swell in his throat. He was speechless.

"Oh, take it," said Wallace.

Kent snatched up the picture of Ann Marlowe and ran his finger over the face as though to rub off the contamination of profane hands. Wallace indicated the rest of his effects and grinned.

"You can have those when you blow here," he said.

Kent winced. Wallace continued ruthlessly: "And with them you can have back your name. From now on you are just a number—er, let me see——Number four-four-three-three-three. Four and three make seven—that's you. Seven years. And a good poker-hand to boot." He smiled at his grim joke. Then with the air of a despot who is bored at jesting, he snapped:

"The works" consisted of a regulation prison haircut, in which the clippers played the major role, a bath in which there seemed more disinfectant than water, and an exhausting session with the finger print and the Bertillon operators. He then was hustled into the clothing room, where a man looked at him just once and tossed him one after the other a pair of coarse trousers, a suit of flannel underwear, a blouse of the same material as the trousers, a pair of hob-nailed and clumsy prison brogans and a cap with an extremely long visor.

"Shake it up," urged the deputy. "We've got to mug you yet. Leave that cap off."

He was "mugged" front and side views all in one shot. He faced the camera and his profile was reflected in a mirror. A guard placed his number—HIS NUMBER!—on his chest so that everything was taken in that one picture—his face, his identity, his situation, his status, his sorrow and his shame.

Then they jerked him out of the chair and another guard marched him off, down a corridor until they came to a door which bore the inscription "James Adams, Warden." The guard knocked softly and opened the door almost simultaneously, and peeped in. He drew Kent inside with him. Kent saw here at a glance a modernly equipped office—an office which might have been one of a hundred thousand in the city he had left. But an office with a distinctly original outlook. For through the great, plate-glass window at the other side could be seen the high-walled prison yard, now almost deserted, as it was just after lockup time and the purple shadows of twilight played garishly beneath the window. A few trusties moved about below.

As Kent and the guard stood in the doorway the warden finished his conversation over one of three telephones on his desk. Kent studied his sternly chiseled, yet not unkindly profile. His eyes were steely gray. His hair was beginning to turn at the temples. A woman, a motherly sort, with her coat and hat on, stood at his elbow.

"I'm sorry, Kate," said the warden, leaning back and smiling at the woman, "I won't be able to make it before 11. Tell Aunt Emmy to stay all night. Now run along—Good-by dear."

Warden Adams glanced at them with a practiced eye and then looked up, a wistful smile on his face.

"I hate to see a young fellow like you in here for manslaughter," he began.

"It was an accident, sir," hoarsely answered Kent, slightly raising his bowed head. He burned to explain.

"I remember your case. I read it in the newspapers. You killed two people in an automobile accident—"

"Yes, an accident—"

"My boy, it may be that you have been picked out as an example, but you must take the rap. You must spend seven years of your life here."

"But it was New Year's Eve—I had been drinking," insisted Kent.

"Your sentence can be reduced by good behavior and careful observance of the prison rules," continued the warden. "You are not, in the common sense of the word, a criminal. They will ride you and call you a 'foreigner.' You will be thrown among criminals, among men with whom you would not ordinarily associate on the outside. I must warn you against the influences you will encounter here." He paused, and then added: "In fact, against the influences you would encounter in any prison."

Cell Mates

His New Companions

"Yes, sir. Thanks, sir."

"And also remember this—prison doesn't give a fellow a yellow streak. But if he has one—they bring it out. That is all."

The warden smiled sadly and turned to the guard.

"Have you a cell assignment for this man?" he asked.

"Yes, sir. No. 329, in Section B."

The warden nodded. The guard beckoned to Kent to follow him. When the door closed Pop Riker, a trusty, who had been standing in the background, came forward and said to the warden:

"Do you realize who you are putting that boy with?"

"No . . . Who?"

"Morgan, the slickest crook we ever played house with here . . . and Machine Gun Butch."

"Yes? Hum—"

The warden arose and began to pace the floor. Then he wheeled on the trusty and said: "Pop, don't you get chicken-hearted. It can't be helped. At the last Governor's Council I warned them that we had three thousand men here—and had cells for only 1800. They want to throw every crook into prison in this state, but they don't care what provision is made for him. What can we do? But some day we'll pay for their penny-pinching. Mark my word!"

The warden walked into the prison and he looked out into the prison yard. He was still standing there when Kent, his slight figure bent beneath his bundle or blankets and mattress, crossed the yard, followed by the guard. The warden shook his head and sighed and turned back to his desk. He had a son, in college, just this other boy's age and build.

Treaty Will Be Rejected by Senate If People Can Muster 33 Independents

Coolidge's American Principles, Defended at Geneva, Supinely Surrendered at London by Hoover Administration

It is the opinion of THE GENERAL BOARD OF THE UNITED STATES NAVY that the London naval treaty is "UNJUST TO THE UNITED STATES."

This is the UNCONDITIONAL and UNANIMOUS verdict of the board, arrived at after the most careful examination of the treaty.

It represents also THE CONSENSUS OF THE OPINION OF THE NAVY, as Admiral Mark L. Bristol, president of the board, emphatically testified when he appeared as a witness before the great committee of the Senate whose members are now sitting as judges of the treaty.

The General Board, which constitutes THE HIGHEST AMERICAN NAVAL AUTHORITY, finds against the London treaty upon the following grounds:

FIRST—Negotiation of such a treaty at this time was not necessary.

SECOND—Ratification of this treaty will not develop an international feeling of good will and mutual respect generally, or even between the five signatory powers.

THIRD—The treaty provides neither for real limitation nor substantial reduction of naval armaments.

FOURTH—Its ratification will not substantially reduce the cost to the American people of that navy second to none which it is the established policy of the United States to provide and maintain.

FIFTH—By the terms of the treaty the United States Navy does not achieve parity with the British Navy and abandons the 5-3 ratio with Japan.

SIXTH—The treaty is wrong in principle because it surrenders the sovereign right of the United States to define the number and types of ships required for its fleet in any category—a right which has been consistently maintained at every naval conference until it was abandoned at London.

SEVENTH—The treaty jeopardizes the future defense of the United States afloat because it establishes evil precedents "WHICH MIGHT READILY EMBARRASS US IN FUTURE NEGOTIATIONS."

These are the well-considered views, the deliberate and unanimous conclusions, as Admiral Bristol respectfully reminded the Committee on Foreign Relations, "OF ONE OF THE BEST EXPERTS WE HAVE" in the United States Navy.

The verdict of the General Board, reinforced by the testimony of Admiral Hilary P. Jones, shows conclusively that THOSE AMERICAN PRINCIPLES WHICH THE ADMINISTRATION OF CALVIN COOLIDGE VIGOROUSLY DEFENDED AT GENEVA WERE SUPINELY SURRENDERED AT LONDON BY THE ADMINISTRATION OF HERBERT HOOVER.

In the light of this indictment and in the wake of this surrender, the rejection of the London naval treaty by the United States Senate ought to follow as surely as the night the day.

And the Senate will reject the treaty if the American people can muster in that citadel of their liberties thirty-three defenders who, having been elected independent representatives of the several states, appreciate the honor and obligation of their high office and refuse to become the puppets of any President.

Her Boy Is in Prison

A Letter From a Boston Mother

The Boston Evening American has received a letter from among the hundreds that come to this newspaper each week from its readers, that so touches the heart-strings it is printed just as written:

To the Editor of the Boston American:

You are doing a marvelously brave thing in exposing conditions at the State Prison. I am so happy that you are trying to help the poor, unfortunate boys over there. I have a son there, my own flesh and blood, my little curly-haired boy that I held in my arms, and now, a prisoner in that horrible place. Mr. Editor, in condemning the old prison, did it ever occur to you to have the quantity and quality of food the boys have "thrown at" them every day investigated also? Why is it, one night last week for supper they had only crackers, a cup of powdered milk and a cup of black coffee? When a man works all day, and gets a "mess" like that for supper, no nourishment, where will he get the strength to work the following day? And on the list of meals is steak and onions. Of what does it consist? Little junk of meat, one potato and one raw onion.

Mr. Editor, a few weeks ago I went over to visit my son, it was in the morning—I said to him, "Son, what is the trouble this morning? Your face looks awful dirty, your eyes are full of sleep; are you sick?" He answered: "No, Ma, I am not sick, but I didn't have water enough to wash with this morning."

And, now that I'm on the subject of water, reminds me when my son was sentenced to serve time there (partly his own fault, mostly due to lying policemen, who wanted to make good fellows out of themselves), an investigator from the State House came to my home, and among the many unnecessary questions he asked me was: "Have you a bath and sanitary conveniences?" (which of course I had). But when they put my boy in that dirty cell, they didn't ask if there was sanitary conveniences, did they?

I won't sign my name, not that I'm afraid for myself, but for my son's safety. If it was found out by the Warden, that my son complained to me of the food, or the treatment there, he might take away his liberty, or, perhaps punish him for what I've written here. But the half has never been told. I will sign,

A GRATEFUL MOTHER.

Perhaps our legislators, who can see no reason for becoming disturbed about the horrors of the Charlestown "dungeon," might find after reading this pathetic note a touch of human sympathy for this mother's boy, and for the other mothers, and for their boys who are being made into confirmed criminals in dark, unsanitary cells in fire-trap Charlestown. It is possible, even, that the appropriations to complete the Norfolk modern prison farm might be speeded up just a little bit, in contrast with the present don't-care, pinch-penny method.

Let them suffer, let them be turned into hard-boiled felons, let them be smothered or roasted to death in their cells when the inevitable fire comes. Can that be all the record that this Legislature is going to leave as its attitude toward the Charlestown pen?

Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde -:- -:-

By Robert Louis Stevenson
The character depicted here
Is seen to be a double one.

A dual personality.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

New York, May 20—Arnold Bennett recently observed that the most interesting side of an individual's life in print is encompassed in the trivial things rarely considered worth mentioning. A good idea to elaborate on a dull day. So here goes:

I am frightened stiff when a policeman walks toward me. I never sit in a barber's chair without wondering what would happen if the barber suddenly let out a scream and went mad. I take two baths a day—a cold plunge in the morning and a warm tub at night and blush when caught in a fib.

I like to see romantic plays and picture myself in the leading role. And when I hear a band conjure up a picture of myself as a hero speaking from the platform of a train in my home town. Yet I have refused radio offers because I am the world's worst speaker. I love to sulk.

The only two vegetables I cannot eat are radishes and carrots. My favorite flower is the gardenia. My table manners are atrocious and I never make the slightest impression on strangers. I will not attend the theater unless sure of an aisle seat. I was arrested at the age of 11 for swimming a la natural.

I read an average of a half dozen books weekly, try to eat in a different restaurant every night and subscribe to two clipping bureaus. I quit drinking because it did not agree with me and discovered I was not only far happier as a teetotaler, but got more out of life. I can read German and speak a little French.

I rarely smoke more than three cigarettes daily and nothing bores me so much as a night club. I like people, but have not more than a dozen intimates I love flattery and am easily flattered. Personal criticism used to infuriate me, but of late years I enjoy it. I have been rescued three times from drowning.

When I take off my clothes at night I scatter them all around the room. I have invested more in fancy pajamas and house robes than in all other articles of wearing apparel combined. My head is shaped exactly like an egg and I wear a 7¼ size hat. Purple is my favorite color. I know no grammatical rules

This is heaps of fun. And imagine getting paid for it! Only one person has ever done me a downright scurrilous trick. I met my wife when she was four years old in a kindergarten. We went through public school together. And lived in a block from each other. My first impression of her was beauty. And I have never lost that impression. My mother-in-law has lived with us 12 years. We have her with us wherever we go. My hair will not stay brushed 10 minutes. I choke myself wearing tight collars and secretly long to play an accordion like Phil Baker.

Note to printer: How is the "I" box holding out? I do not like to be alone. My only articles of jewelry are a cameo ring—my mother's engagement ring—and a Cartier wrist watch presented by one of my closest friends. I have more than 200 canes in a collection coming from every city and country I ever visited Frequently I think I am losing my mind. I use a gargle called sodiphene a half-dozen times a day. My tailor is Lanvin in Paris and my shoemaker is Costa in the same city. My choice candy is peppermint wafers made by Sherry and my favorite dessert is floating island. I do not drink coffee at night and do not snore. I was born in Plattsburg, Mo., and reared in Gallipolis, Ohio.

A fellow could run on this way for a couple of columns. My breakfast is invariably sliced oranges, thinly sliced whole wheat toast, soft boiled eggs, coffee and preserves. I often eat a glass of jelly at a morning meal. I have not eaten lunch in 20 years. I weigh 148 pounds, am long, thin and like to go to fires. I have scarcely any physical courage, although I am not easily bluffed. I love gloomy days and I once played the mandolin. My initials O. O. stand for Oscar Odd.

I jump every time the telephone rings, like perfume and am a hound for cut-out monogrammed handkerchiefs. I will not be a house guest on account of my disorderly working habits. I believe in life after the change called death. When I was a child I swiped pennies from my grandmother. I do not belong to any clubs. When I become excited my voice has a tremolo. I am old enough to know a lot of things I have never learned—and to my own discomfiture. I hate sleep at night and love it in the morning. A column like this fairly explodes in your hand. Z-z-z-boom—and it is finished.

H. G. Wells Writes

All these three facts have been disputed in the past. Today controversy about any of them is dead.

H. G. Wells

Equally dead, we shall find, is the older and really more plausible belief that life has had numerous origins, and, even now, can at times be created afresh. That, it seems, is not so. Life is one thing. Every living thing is related through a common descent to all the rest of life. There is no reason a priori why this should be so. But all the evidence is that it is so.

In all the three instances we have given, the round earth, the larger sun and the evolution of life, men have disputed these great generalizations because they had started in life with contrary assumptions and found the shock to the new idea too great.

They had intermingled their moral and religious ideas with the notion of a special creation of each kind of animal at a certain date or with the notion of a flat earth or with the notion of a small subservient sun going about our planet, and it seemed to them that if these notions were destroyed their very heavens would fall.

But new generations have followed them, have accepted the new ideas and found the heavens of religious feeling and moral impulse none the worse for a broadened and enlightened outlook.

Today there is no denial of the fact of organic evolution except on the part of manifestly ignorant, prejudiced and superstitious minds.

But here we enter upon a less certain and established region of biological study. In this Fourth Book we are going to discuss how individual development is carried out and further how Evolution has occurred. There we find active and intelligent minds still differing very widely.

What are the relations of individual development to the development of the species? There is no question any longer that olution has occurred, but our question is now what has been its method? Or its methods?

This is a field where the debris and glow of recent controversies are still evident and where wide and often flaming differences of opinion are still found.

And just as in the opening of Book 3 we made it quite plain what fact we had to prove so here it will enable the reader to understand the full significance of what follows, if we give first the broad questions our chapters are designed to illuminate, and point out what is still arguable and what is the present state of the discussion.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

The Walls Are Going Down

Marconi talked to New York from Rome the other day. Clearly and casually he and Madame Marconi chatted over 4400 miles. So near were they in spirit as well as wave length that Madame Marconi told her friends of the coming baby.

Elsie Robinson

Four thousand four hundred miles of space annihilated! But if you were born since the war that doesn't seem very exciting. You're used to miracles. If you had been young in 1905, or thereabouts. Senator Marconi's feat would make shivers run up your shins and down your memory. Life was incomparably different then. It was full of walls. Walls more solid than any ever built of stone or steel. Walls of time—and space.

Time and space—they belonged to the eternal mysteries. Like birth and death—they belonged to God. Man might accomplish many things—but he couldn't tamper with time and space any more than he could tamper with birth and death. It would be almost impious to try. And so time and space hedged men around with impenetrable walls. Cut people off from each other. Made men feel tiny and impotent—made them feel that there were things they couldn't lick.

I was a bride in Vermont in 1903. I had come from California and I was insanely homesick, as Californians always are when taken away from their place. I used to go up on a hill behind my home and look out toward the west. I used to think—"Mother and Dad are out there. If I could hear their voices everything would be all right. I wouldn't mind this strange, new life so much. If I could hear their voices—IF I COULD HEAR THEIR VOICES—"

Over and over I would say it, standing there alone on the hill. At first I would say it in a little, lonely whisper. But sometimes I would scream, for the hopelessness of it was so terrible. IT WAS LIKE TALKING INTO A GRAVE. IT WAS AS FUTILE THEN FOR ME TO TALK TO CALIFORNIA AS FOR ME TO WANT TO TALK TO THE DEAD. No voice could possibly come back.

We were shut in like that, in 1903. And, because of it, something very sad and unhealthy happened in human life. Those vital currents which swing between human hearts—the currents of love and enthusiasm and mutual helpfulness and inspiration—were cut off. Days and weeks must intervene between the time YOU felt a splendid impulse and the time the OTHER PERSON heard about it. And even then it carried no warm personal vibration. So life held great arid gaps of loneliness and discouragement. IF YOU MOVED ABOUT AT ALL, LIFE BECAME A SUCCESSION OF LITTLE DEATHS. All men lived within the imprisonment of those grim, gray walls of time and space.

BUT LITTLE BY LITTLE THE WALLS ARE COMING DOWN!

The things men thought they couldn't lick, are being licked. Four thousand four hundred miles are no longer 4400 miles. They are only AN IDEA now—idea which no longer means what it meant 20, or even 10, years ago. And that idea can be overcome in an instant by the use of a little box. Time is vanishing—space is disappearing—they are being erased from our consciousness.

But, of course, "the little box" isn't really performing the miracle. MAN'S MIND HAS PERFORMED IT. Man can do whatever he THINKS he can do. Men once THOUGHT they couldn't abolish time and space, solid and invincible, as firmly as though it had been a riveted chain. Then man changed his mind. He decided that he COULD lick time and space. AND NOW THE WALLS ARE FALLING!

Perhaps some day that last great wall called Death will crumble just as surely—WHEN MEN THINK THAT WAY!

Art for Art's Sake

By ARTHUR BAER

The art center, which seems to be in the exact middle of nothing in particular, says that American culture exceeds the world. But we are bozos on art.

We have too many art students who get their hands full of paint and charcoal during the day and wipe them on each other at night.

We are told that there has been a decided improvement in streamline flivvers. But they still rattle a trifle and twitter with the language of mechanical canaries. They may have made them beautiful, but they never made them dumb.

Our landscapes have been chewed right up to the far-flung horizon by filling stations and hot Bowser stands. We admit that there is nothing exquisite about a torrid frankfurter booth. But if we cannot dabble in oils and water color we will dabble in mustard.

The assembled ethical and temperamental critics object heavily to the sordidness and ugliness of our steam radiators in American rooms. Now, only an artist could think of that.

If you don't think a steam radiator is beautiful you should have been with Commander Byrd last winter.

Our linoleum and wall paper indicate that we have as much conception of the finer things of life as a turtle has about road clearance. Well, they don't expect us to smack a roach with a mop on one of Corot's paintings, do they?

We may not know anything about about art. But we certainly know how to dial a phone. And we're nervous since the Supreme Court passed a law against liquor receptacles. Why, a man can be arrested for having a hollow tooth.
